Korean Veterans Receive Benefits

More and more veterans disabled since the beginning of the Korean conflict are turning to the Veterans Administration for medical care and other disability benefits.

According to the VA, a total of 2,075 such veterans were hospitalized by the VA at the end of January, the latest month for which figures are available. This is an increase of nearly 200 over the previous month's total of 1,879.

In addition, 2,042 Korean veterans applied for a variety of medical services at VA outpatient clinics during February. These medical services included treatment for service-connected disabilities, examinations for disability compensation or pension, and examinations for hospital or domiciliary care.

A total of 6,830 since-Korea veterans were drawing VA disability compensation or pension at the end of February, an increase of nearly 1,500 over the previous month's total of 5,351.

Also, at the end of February, 262 veterans, disabled in service since Korea, were in training at VA expense in schools, on farms, or on-the-job, to overcome the handicaps of their disabilities. This is an increase of almost 100 percent from the January figures.

The VA load of death claims, stemming mainly from the Korean conflict, also is increasing. At the end of February, the dependents of 10,388 such deceased veterans were drawing death compensation or pension from the VA. This is an increase of 666 death cases over the previous month's total.

Approved indemnity claims, up to $10,000 each, for deaths in service or as a result of service since the Korean conflict started, totaled 5,975 to the end of February, an increase of 654 over the previous month's cumulative total of 5,321.

In addition to these case loads from the Korean conflict, the VA is providing hospitalization for seriously disabled military personnel who are not likely to return to duty because of their disabilities.

EVERY FORCE KNOWN TO radio, engineers and newsmen, are being marshalled by the Mutual-Don Lee broadcasting system for its radio coverage of the July conventions of the Republican and Democratic parties. These reach fever pitch in Chicago's International Amphitheater this July, and Mutual-Don Lee has assigned more than 150 persons to cover them. Focal point for this coverage is the specially equipped broadcast booth and master control room overlooking the platform, from where the voting and debates take place, and will link the fifty microphone pick-up points set-up through the city. This sounds as if the coverage is so complete, will be very nearly so.
