

Vets In School Advised Of Step For Advancing

Veterans training under the G.I. Bill are reminded by the Veterans Administration of steps they must take in order to move up from their present courses to courses at the next higher level.

First, the VA said, they must apply for advanced training either before they complete their current course, or within 30 days following its completion.

Second, they must go ahead with their additional training either within 30 days after finishing their present courses, or on the first day that enrollment of students in their new course is permitted—whichever is later.

The normal summer vacation period doesn't count in such cases for veteran-students in colleges and other schools organized on a term, quarter or semester basis.

A veteran, for example, who receives his AB degree in June, and who applies for graduate training in time, need not start his advanced course until the fall semester.

The VA said its rules apply to nearly all veterans in training under the G.I. Bill: Those discharged on or before July 25, 1947, who started their courses on or before the July 25, 1951, cut-off date, and who have been in training since except for certain reasons beyond their control.

Veterans expecting to take advanced training under the G.I. Bill were urged to discuss their plans with the VA before completion of their present courses.

It's not surprising in the least that music is on the list as "top medicine" at mental hospitals throughout the country. People have been using music for centuries to give a "lift to the spirits." And so when they tell us that patients respond to both the listening and the active participation in music... we have a tendency to say, "Of course... why not?"

There's music for every mood... to inspire, to soothe, to call up a happy response. If the mentally ill... who are usually interested in no outside influences... will respond to music... what must it do for the well? The answer is that music is an important spice to existence. The listening and the playing are enriching to anyone. So when you think of all the good things for your children's future... the strong body, the capable mind, the good character... remember the things of the spirit. Remember to give them music.

Now is the time to start your children out in the lasting inspiration of classical music... Let them learn to love the music of centuries, by choosing their own favorite pieces of sheet music. We have a fine selection and are happy to help find the music best suited to the beginner at OTT & RICK-ETTS MUSIC STORE, 101-105 W. Cass St. Phone: 3-3202. (Paid advertisement)

MACHINE POLITICS IN OREGON

Eight candidates for delegates to the Republican National convention in Chicago have refused to accept a moral and legal obligation to support in the convention the choice of Oregon voters for president and vice president.

The "strategy" utilized by these eight candidates has all the earmarks of imported machine politics. The scheme was promoted by Lowell C. Paget, state chairman for Senator Robert A. Taft.

Faced with the almost certainty that General Dwight D. Eisenhower would win an overwhelming majority in this state, the Taft forces refused to permit Taft's name to go on the ballot in an open and fair contest but instead devised a "slick strategy" by which they hoped to sneak eight delegates into the Oregon delegation who will be in a position to vote for Taft on the first ballot.

As an example of the "strategy" employed by this group, there is the well-known name of Phil Metschan who filed by petition. Most people in Oregon will instantly recognize the name as one who had been high in the Republican party councils and was a well-known hotel proprietor in Portland for years. But most people may not know that the well-known Phil Metschan died last year, that his widow is an ardent supporter of Eisenhower and the Phil Metschan whose name appears on the Oregon ballot as a candidate for delegate is a nephew of the hotel man.

These eight candidates filed for delegates under an obsolete 1905 law which nobody thought to repeal when in 1915 the legislature passed a bill setting up the Oregon presidential primary system whereby the people directly vote their choice for president and vice president and select instructed delegates to carry out their will.

No candidate in thirty years has filed under the obsolete 1905 law until the Taft "strategists" dug up this repudiated method from the political grave. Under the 1915 law and under which all other candidates, 77 of them, each candidate must file a declaration that if elected he will work in the convention for those candidates for president and vice president who receive the largest number of votes in the Oregon primary.

In addition to Paget the eight candidates who refused to pledge support to the choice of the voters are Robert A. Bennett, Mrs. Irene H. Gerlinger, John R. Latourette, Jr., and Irving Rand, all candidates for delegate-at-large, and U.S. Valentin of Klamath Falls and Ernest G. Swigert of Portland, both district candidates.

If Oregon voters are to keep their privilege of participating directly in the nomination of the country's two top officials, they should defeat these eight by a majority so overwhelming that no one in the future will attempt to rob them of their voting privilege in the presidential primary.

One of the eight candidates for delegates who filed by petition explained the action by saying that it "was in protest to a small political clique in Oregon."

Perhaps this candidate will find on May 16 that if there is any political clique other than that headed by Paget it will be the "clique" of Oregon voters on May 16.
