By MYRTLE BURR

Vacation time is long looked forward to by youngsters every year. To them it represents a golden time of no more pencils, no more books, no more teachers and all the rest. But there are a lot of hours to fill every day. And sometimes those generally busy little bodies are hard-put to find things to occupy every moment. Generally, we agree that summertime should be for relaxing. However, here's a thought that may give your kiddies stimulation as well as wholesome creative activity.

You've been planning to start the youngsters in with music study for sometime perhaps. Well, NOW's the time. The summertime hours of practice will not be missed, even if your child is at the "play stage" and hankering to be outdoors with his fellows. An hour in the early morning keeps up the power of concentration... so that when time comes for school to begin again... he'll be all primed and ready for getting back in the swing of study.

Come in and talk to us about an appropriate instrument for your child. We'll be glad to see you anytime.

The organ is becoming more and more popular in our homes. There are now organ clubs in many big cities... and everywhere, enthusiasm is growing over the study of this instrument. It's exciting to learn... so come in soon and see our fine selection of Hammond organs... to fit everyone's pocketbook at OTT & RICKETTS MUSIC STORE, 101-105 W. Cass St., Phone 3-3202.
