Sugar Plus Garbage Recipe For 'Pruno' That Produces Binge For Oregon Convicts

SALEM (AP) — Oregon State Prison Penitentiary convicts who make "pruno," that elusive, illegal alcoholic beverage, would have a hard time giving anyone a recipe, for they seldom make it the same way twice.

Two times within the last two weeks, and many times in the past, convict activities involving "pruno" have made the headlines.

Two weeks ago, two prison trusties under the influence of "pruno" escaped, stole a truck, took a wild ride and were captured by a group of irate Salem citizens after the truck had stalled on a Salem front lawn. Last Wednesday a guard was stabbed by another pruno-drunk convict.

The key ingredient to this havoc-producing drink is sugar, which combined with practically any fruit, vegetable or even garbage will produce "pruno," given enough time to ferment.

And it is not easy to keep sugar from the prisoners, Deputy Prison Warden Lawrence O'Brien explains.

"The prison cannery where sugar is stored cannot be guarded well enough with the present staff," he says. Prisoners unload the sugar from freight cars, handle it in the prison kitchens and use it in the mess halls, and at any one of those places a little of it can disappear.

Even Garbage Used

Fruit juices, which are a part of prison fare, are used frequently to make "pruno," but even if they were eliminated, almost any form of food taken from the mess hall or garbage from the kitchen can, and has, been substituted.

One glance around the prison yard is enough to convince the observer that hiding the stuff is no problem. The penitentiary is in the midst of a construction program, and building materials are scattered about the new cell block and other projects offering a variety of hiding places for the bottles and cans in which pruno is aged.

Convicts have even been known to mix it and carry it around in old shoes.

Prison Handicapped

Deputy O'Brien reports that efforts to stamp out 'pruno" production are handicapped by lack of adequate prison facilities and custodial help.

Locking up supplies doesn't always help, he says. "With so many professional lock breakers, you would have to have a guard for every lock."

Each prison seems to have its own little problem, veteran prison administrator O'Brien says. "Folsom has its gambling. San Quentin has its hi-jacking of food from the commissary. Alcatraz has periodic violent eruptions. Other prisons have race riots or food riots. Oregon has pruno."

Successful Author Was Poor Student

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — A Southern Illinois University English teacher says Robert Lewis Taylor, author of six successful books, was one of her poorest students.

"Once when asked to write something," Mrs. Mae T. Smith recalls, "he turned it into a wild conglomeration of impossible situations that had not the remotest connection with the assignment.

"His paper was returned fairly blushing with red ink, the recollection of which makes me do the blushing now. I've wished many times since that I had kept that zany story. It would be worth a tidy sum now in the hands of his publishers."

Money For Mortgages Tight In Austria

NEW YORK (AP) — Mortgage money in Austria can be had from lending institutions only for repairing properties, reports John C. Tyson, president of Previews Inc., national real estate clearing house, on returning from a tour of European countries.

"The interest on these loans is 12 per cent," Tysen says. "Many mortgages call for the repayment of principal in commodities rather than currency. The reason for this is the lack of confidence in the future of the currency. Lenders want to be as sure as possible they they retain the purchasing power of the funds they invest."

Although very high temperatures can be found high above the earth, the atmosphere is so thin it is believed they would have little effect on an object moving through it.

HERBS

—And the fruit thereof shall be the meat, And the leaf thereof the medicine"—Ezekial 47:12.

The above quotation would seem to indicate that herbs are something that has and will continue to be used for hundreds of years for the relief of mankind's ailments. Herbs have been used for the treatment of conditions of the skin, intestines, kidneys, bladder, female organs, children's com- conditions. If you are sick you should see your doctor, but if you are like so many others who have tried most everything and are still under par, then perhaps herbs offer a solution to your problem.
