Returned Vacationist Listed One Of Perils Of American Office Life

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the perils of American office life these summer days is the returned vacationist.

He insists that you hear about his vacation — but he closes his big ears like a car door when you want to tell him about your vacation.

How can you deal with him? You can't get away. He will even trail you into the men's room to relate the strange things that happened to him.

You would think no one else had taken a vacation before in the history of the human race.

The only sure way to halt him is to try to borrow money from him, or else stop him by interrupting, "oh, by the way, Joe, while you were gone I saw a flying saucer."

What the average office needs from June until Labor Day is a "vacation hour" each morning.

For the first 60 minutes of each workday the office staff could assemble and listen en masse to the returning pilgrims tell the sad and wonderful story of what befell them.

Anybody who even mentioned the word vacation the rest of the day would be automatically fired.

Various Types Listed

The office vacationists fall into pretty standard types. Here are a few you may recognize:

1. The postcard fiend—he writes you a postcard as he leaves his home, and stops off at every other filling station along the way to mail more. Two weeks after he is back at work you are still getting postcards about what a swell time he is having.

2. The calamity kid—bee-stung and covered with poison ivy, he returns on crutches. "Just stopped by on my way to the hospital," he mumbles through his bandages. "The doc says I got to spend a month in bed. Will you handle my work while I'm gone."

3. The sultry stenographer—she looks the color of a hand-rubbed walnut bookcase from days of beach sunning, and there are wedding bells in her eyes. But the new boy friend she met at the shore quits calling her up after three days, and for the rest of the summer she snaps at you if you even say "hello."

4. The camera nut—he has to be forcibly restrained from pulling down the office window blinds and trying to show everybody the interesting new movies he made of Niagara Falls.

5. The statistician—this boy not only has the figures of how much he paid for gas and oil at every stop—he also wants to tell you the air pressure in each tire the day he drove up Pike's Peak.

"At Home" Boor Included

6. The everloving homebody—"vacations are more fun at home," he begins. And for the next three hours he bores you with the details of how much money he saved and what a grand time he had repainting his little grey nest in the suburbs.

7. The funny fellow—everything comical happens to him. "I threw my mother-in-law to the bears in Yellowstone Park," he says, "and guess what—they arrested me. How did I know you aren't allowed to feed the animals?"

8. The don't-let-'em-get-away-with-anything guy—"they try to rob you every step of the way," he moans, and neglects to mention the dime tip he pocketed that the tourist before him had left for the waitress at a hotdog stand in Tennessee.

9. The boss—"aren't they cute?" he says, pulling out some snapshots of his children wearing striped bathing suits. And how can you tell him they look like baby saber-toothed tigers?

Shakespearean Festival Offers Popular Plays

ASHLAND — Two of the most popular plays ever presented at the Oregon Shakespearean Festival and two virtual unknowns will be presented in the 1953 season, which will run for the entire month of August.

The old favorites are "The Taming of the Shrew" and "The Merchant of Venice." The lesser-known plays are "Coriolanus" and "Henry VI, Part 1."

"Merchant" was last presented at the festival in 1948, but has probably been given more often than any other of the Bard's works at the Ashland event. "Shrew", which held attendance records until last season's "Twelfth Night" set a new mark, was last presented in 1949 in Ashland.

The tragedy for 1953, "Coriolanus," is a powerful drama seldom produced because of the limitations of the modern stage. Producing director Angus Bowmer thinks that the play, which is somewhat similar to this year's "Julius Caesar," will go well on the festival's Elizabethan stage.

The same goes for "Henry VI, Part 1," which is almost impossible to do on a small stage. It is noted for Shakespeare's portrayal of Joan of Arc, but is packed with battle scenes and action.

Meanwhile, requests for reservations for next season have already started to come in the festival office reports. The first order came on July 31, the day before the 1952 season opened.

Driver License Suspensions Up During July

Traffic violation convictions in Oregon decreased slightly in July, but driver license suspensions resulting from court action or action by the secretary of state's office increased, the state department reports.

Drivers were convicted of 2,963 moving traffic errors, as compared with 3,941 reported in June and 3,689 reported in July last year.

Suspensions during the month increased, however, with 455 drivers losing licenses. Two hundred and twenty-seven of these were given out after drunk driving convictions.

Other reasons for suspensions included failure to report an accident, 23; reckless driving, 41; violation of basic rule, 53; failure to yeild right of way to pedestrian, 2; and driving record, 7.

Suspension on "driving record" means the driver had too frequent accidents and violations to be considered a safe risk behind the wheel of a car. Such suspensions are handed out only after a driver has been interviewed and given a chance to improve his record, the secretary of state said.

At midnight a bountiful potluck supper was enjoyed.

More Dentists, Nurses, Medical Assistants Needed In United States, President's Commission Reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The President's commission on health needs of the nation was told Tuesday that thousands more dentists, nurses and medical assistants are needed to care for the American people.

Summaries of panel discussions held during the last two months by 21 medical, military and lay experts were presented at the opening of a two-day session by the commission.

The panel summaries indicated the exact shortage of trained people, including physicians and surgeons, depends upon how U. S. medical care is "organized."

Proposing a plan for doing this is one purpose of the commission. President Truman appointed its members last December. He has been plugging for a national compulsory health insurance plan. The commission was told to study the facts and present a program for "safeguarding and improving the health of the nation."

AMA Cries 'Politics'

The American Medical Association, opposed to what it calls "socialized medicine," has described the appointment of the Truman commission an act of "political expediency."

The resolution adopted by AMA convention delegates last June emphasized that this is a presidential campaign year. It said the AMA should not judge the commission's final report until after it is made next December.

The panel summaries estimated about 3,000 dentists are being turned out each year, but around 3,400 are needed to maintain the proportion of dentists to total population at its present level.

They also estimated thousands of more nurses are needed each year than are trained; and said the American Hospital Association has reported 47,000 job vacancies in such fields as laboratory technicians, occupational therapy, X-ray technicians and hospital administration.

It was estimated that less than one-half of Americans seek dental care each year. Members of the dental panel agreed that "adequate" dental care is not available to all citizens.

'Treasure Trove' Hunt Upsets Arkansas Town

PRESCOTT, Ark. (AP) — A "treasure trove" of $84 has been found, much to the relief of town fathers.

The money was hidden by radio station KXAR as a publicity stunt. Since that day about a month and a half ago, the town has been topsy-turvy. People had searched in the town clock and the Prescott high school football stadium among other places. At one point, high school officials had to padlock the stadium to keep the field from being almost completely denuded of grass.

When the treasure was found in the city park by Mrs. Gus McCaskill, station manager L. B. Tooley said more than 500 persons were milling around the area.
