Name-In-Bottle Romance Doesn't Lead To Wedding

DINGLE, Ireland (AP) — Frank Hayostak started back to his Johnstown, Pa., home last night without even a final wave from blue-eyed Breda O'Sullivan, his Irish pen-pal who found his name and address in a bottle.

Breda, in fact, harvested oats on her mother's farm while Frank climbed aboard the bus for Tralee. No one else came to see him off either, not even the disappointed Dingle folk who hoped that a romance would cap the couple's six years of letter writing.

Frank flew to Ireland two weeks ago to meet the young colleen he had known only through letters that started the day she found the bottle with his name and address on the Dingle shore. Frank had thrown the bottle overboard from the troopship on which he was returning from World War II army service in Europe.

A week after his arrival, both flatly denied there was any romance. But one of the local folk said that Frank "looked a very disappointed man, indeed" as he rode away last night in the rear of the bus.

Simple Rules Against Fire Hazards Offered

CORVALLIS (AP) — Campers can follow a few simple rules and be certain they are not creating forest fire hazards with their fires, the farm forestry specialist for the extension service at Oregon State College said Wednesday.

The specialist, Charles R. Ross, said this is the way to do it: Clear away all burnable material from a circle five feet in diameter, dig a hole in the center, and build a small fire.

In choosing the fire area, avoid brush, logs, overhead inflammable material and ground filled with punky roots.

Before leaving, stir the ashes while sprinkling them with water. If water is not available, use moist earth.

ANTICIPATE THOSE UNEXPECTED GUESTS.
