Eagle Cannot Carry Off Anything Exceeding Own Weight, Assertion

PORTLAND (AP) — A federal biologist said here Thursday that a lot of talk about eagles isn't so. They aren't comparable to flying boxcars, for instance.

The biologist, Ralph H. Imler, who is regarded in the regional office of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service here where he works, as a top-flight eagle man, said it's this way:

There is no evidence to show an eagle can fly off with anything that weighs more than it does. And most eagles weigh 9 to 10 pounds with a few Bald eagles getting up around 13 pounds. Yet there are recurrent stories of eagles flying off with a lamb weighing anywhere from 30 to 40 pounds.

"Wholly impossible!" said Imler, who has studied that particular subject all the way from Colorado to Alaska.

"Eagles have been observed carrying a full-grown jackrabbit weighing six to seven pounds. The flight was labored because the load was heavy," he said. "There is no actual record of an eagle carrying as much as 15 pounds. Ten pounds is near the absolute limit."

Imler said he was moved to comment because of a recent Associated Press story from Chehalis telling of Golden eagles killing lambs and flying off with those weighed 35 to 40 pounds.

Imler said that in the first place he would be more inclined to believe the eagles at Chehalis are Bald eagles — the national bird — rather than Golden. There are some Golden eagles around, but not as many as there are Bald eagles, he said.

Two Species Near Alike

It takes an expert to tell the difference between a Golden eagle and a young Bald eagle, he said. Until about three years of age, the Bald eagle lacks the distinctive white head and tail and looks very much like the Golden eagle.

Neither is normally very important as a predator, Imler said. If farmers find a bird or a pair, to be inflicting losses, they can get relief by calling the Fish and Wildlife Service, which will institute any needed controls.

The Bald eagle is protected.

LARCENY CHARGE FACED

K. C. Shock, of Eugene, pleaded innocent Wednesday in Drain justice court and is held in the county jail in $100 bail on a petty larceny charge, the sheriff's office said.

Shock was arrested in Eugene and returned to Roseburg by deputies.
