

Two-Level Hillside Home Featured In Modern Design To Be Erected

Scheduled for early construction is a two-level hillside house on Hawthorne Terrace. Designed by Roseburg architect Alex Pavlov, the house will be built by Western Realty Company.

The house was oriented to a spectacular view over Roseburg and the valley to the north. The living room has glass walls both to the north view and to a shaded terrace on the south. Two of the three bedrooms face the north view, while the kitchen, dining and service rooms face the outdoor living areas to the south of the house. East and west walls are virtually windowless, to exclude early morning and late afternoon sunlight.

Outstanding feature of the house will be the stairway up from the lower level. To avoid duplication of inside and outside stairways ordinarily necessary, a stair was devised which is enclosed on three sides, and covered by a skylighted roof, so it is usable as an entrance stair as well as sheltered communication between the house's two levels. Liberal use of planting further eases the transition from outdoors to the house interior. On the lower level is a large all-purpose room with a large window wall, and a covered drive-through double car port. Located under the bed room wing, the car port is large enough to shelter four cars when necessary, and the ample driveway will accommodate several more.

The plan features a circulation pattern which allows access to any room in the house without intrusion into the privacy of other areas. The utility room is centrally located so laundry from the bedrooms as well as the kitchen is easily and quickly handled. The utility room contains a closet for outdoor and work clothes, and an exterior door allows use of this room as a "mud" room, eliminating the tracking of dirt through other parts of the house.

The dining room is an "el" off the living room, and is adjacent to the kitchen for easy serving. French doors open to the dining terrace. A breakfast bar between dining room and kitchen, with a sliding pass door, allows quickly served informal dining. The kitchen is compactly arranged, but spacious enough for movements of more than one person.

Detailing and construction, both inside and out, will be simple and straight-forward, making for ease of both maintenance and house-keeping.

Stevenson Delivers Fighting Address

America's power to promote freedom, justice and peace in the world.

"He told Legionnaires patriotism is not short, frenzied outburst of emotion, but the tranquil and steady dedication of a lifetime."

Then in his first major drive for votes in the East, Stevenson said there are men among us "who use 'patriotism' as a club for attacking other Americans."

He continued: "What can we say for the man who proclaims himself a patriot—and then for political or personal reasons attacks the patriotism of faithful public servants?"

"I give you, as a shocking example, the attacks which have been made on the loyalty and the motives of our great wartime chief of staff, Gen. Marshall."

"To me this is the type of 'patriotism' which is, in Dr. Johnson's phrase, the last refuge of scoundrels."

Respects Ike As oldier
Last night at his Springfield, Ill., headquarters, it was announced Stevenson will begin a 7,600-mile tour Sept. 5 which will carry him into nine Western states.

Stevenson made only one reference in his speech to Eisenhower. He said: "The fact that a great general and I are competing candidates for the presidency will not diminish my warm respect for his military achievements. Nor will that respect keep me from using every honest effort to defeat him in November."

Stevenson praised the Legion for its fight to awaken America to the need of military preparedness—and he said this fight largely is won. But he warned there are other tasks we dare not neglect.
