Eight New Polio Cases Enter Malheur Hospital

NYSSA (AP) — Superintendent John O'Toole said Wednesday that eight new polio victims have entered the Malheur Memorial Hospital for treatment in the past six days.

The total cases in the area since June now stands at 26, he said. The disease has been fatal to three.

pendency almost as much as my rainbow pleasures. A child enjoys his self-pity because he feels no body in the history of the world has been so put upon. When he grows older he knows this isn't so, and that robs him of most of the fun of feeling sorry for himself.

Learns Basic Principles

In college a fellow picks up a lot of detailed knowledge, but it is in kindergarten that he learns the basic principles that will guide him through life. Here are a few I learned the hard way:

1. If you don't like to doff your cap to older people to be polite, don't wear a cap.

2. Never hit a person of the opposite sex when she's down, even if she is bigger than you—and particularly when somebody is looking.

3. Don't lend your last marble, because if you do you won't have anything left to play the game yourself.

4. Never tell all you know. (I made the mistake of confiding to a pal I had a crush on a little girl in kindergarten—a talented creature, she could toe-dance at five. The next day even the big bullies in the second grade were teasing me about it, and I had to call off the whole affair.)

5. Don't brag about your galloping.

In our kindergarten galloping was a high art, and I was the best. (I still think so.) One day while we were wheeling around the room...

Gallop... Gallop... Gallop... I called over to the teacher, who was pounding the piano "Look at me, Mrs. Steele, look at me now!"

Just then my flying foot hooked the big flat hoof of a red-haired little filly ahead of me, and down she went on her fat little face—and up again she came in tears, with both fists swinging. I don't recall ever galloping in public since.

Yes, a wise man can learn most of what he needs to know about life in kindergarten.

Surgery For Cancer Transforms Patient From 'Statistic' To One Looking Forward To Ripe Old Age

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Some weeks ago A. P. Cooke, editor and publisher of the weekly Plant City, Fla., Courier, learned some bad news about one of his readers.

The reader was himself. Should he print the news or keep silent?

Cooke hesitated, then sat down and typed out his regretful column, "Just Roaming."

"The word cancer is an ugly word," he began. "It is, to most folks, a cruel word, a despairing word because the very thought of it brings despair to anyone close to one so afflicted."

"I have just been told that I have a cancer in the tissues of the mouth, but I am not despairing. 'You see, medical people say that early detection is half the battle, and medical science has advanced rapidly in the treatment of this affliction.'"

Editor Cooke recalled wryly how often he, like his readers, had dropped a dime into the little boxes that appear on store counters during the American Cancer Society's annual drive—boxes that say: "Cancer strikes one of every five."

"I thought—if I ever gave it a thought—that I was one of the other four. But I was wrong. 'I have become a statistic... not altogether a pleasant thought...'"

Cooke then told his readers how a dentist had first noticed the suspicious lump in his mouth, how his doctor had diagnosed it as cancer, and of his intention to fly to New York to see the specialist his own doctor recommended.

"If I can, I will keep you informed... meanwhile, good luck and God be with you until we meet again."

On his arrival here Cooke met further bad news. The specialist recommended immediate surgery.

Cooke had to make up his mind in minutes whether to be operated on two days later—or wait another week. As he hesitated, the specialist said:

"When your garage is on fire, put it out before it burns up your car."

Submits To Surgery
"Operate," said Cooke. The next day he was in the hospital, and the day after that he was operated on. He spent more than four hours under the knife, required three blood transfusions, but 12 days later he left the hospital.

Today Editor Cooke has a happy ending story for his readers. The stitches are out of his jaw, he feels the surgeon is as optimistic over the results of the operation as he is, and he is on his way home.

Looks Forward To Old Age
Before he and his wife left, I visited with them on a park bench in Greenwich Village.

"I feel as if I had been through a tremendous nightmare," Cooke said.

"The hospital code word for my type of operation is 'Commando,' and I can truthfully say that after going through it you feel like you've been on a Commando raid. But now I feel like I've got a life expectancy of 80."

He expressed gratitude that his own doctor had told him promptly the full truth of his ailment.

"It's a hell of a shock," he said. "But it was almost as hard for my doctor to tell me as it was for me to hear it. He hated to."

"But I'm glad he did tell me. Pussy-footing... bumfuzzling... doesn't do any good. It's like the specialist said about your garage. If it's on fire, you want to know it—and do something about it quick."

Wool Market In Australia Strongly Eyed

NEW YORK (AP) — Makers of men's and women's wool clothing are eyeing Australia keenly this week. The way the price cat finically jumps at the raw wool auctions there may have a lot to do with the price of your next spring's suit.

Some wool fabric manufacturers here think the first sales at Sydney showed a firm enough tendency for the American mills to set prices for next spring's women's wear lines at about the same level as last spring. The lines formally open around the middle of this month.

Others contend it is too early yet to tell how the Australian auctions are going. American buying in Sydney has been very sketchy so far. Most of the wool offered has been of a quality not sought here.

Many fabric makers, therefore, are holding up the pricing of spring lines, even though many of them have enough wool already bought at the old price. The way the price goes in Sydney will still have its effect, they say.

Australian wool prices started out higher on the opening day Monday, then slipped, and are now reported about the same as when the auctions there closed in June.

In 1950 North Carolina's production of milk was 409 pounds per person.

Government Wouldn't Let Him Be Good Samaritan

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Joe L. Cowart wanted to be a good Samaritan—but the government wouldn't let him.

Cowart, who raises burley tobacco on his Fayette County farm, discovered that he overplanted his 5.9-acre allotment by one-fifth of an acre.

He wanted to know if he could market the excess with the income going to the March of Dimes to aid polio sufferers.

"Unfortunately no," said a Department of Agriculture official. So today he is going to plow it under.

September Heat Causes Harvest During Night

PRINEVILLE (AP) — The September heat wave is causing potato growers in neighboring Jefferson County to harvest their crop at night for the first time.

The digging of potatoes started Tuesday, but was switched to night-time after the sun became too hot. The first shipments are expected to go to the San Francisco area Thursday.

Growers in the Prineville area, where the harvest is scheduled to start Monday, said they would resort to night work too, if the weather remains hot.

WOOD VALUES BASED

SYDNEY (AP) — A further easing of wool values was indicated in early sales at Thursday's Sydney auction, the last of the opening series for the new season.

Activity on behalf of Japan was the weakest of the four days of sale. The continent and the United Kingdom were main buyers.
