Individualism Put First By Oregon Civic Leader

Mrs. Hermah and Mrs. Roy Livingston. Mrs. Gilchrist had charge of the program printing, US Security Paramount.

Mrs. Taylor, past president of the Portland BPW, Federation of Women's Clubs and Toastmasters, a member of the mayor's committee on civil defense, chairman of the statewide Women's Prison Council and on the governor's committee on children and youth, in addition to many other activities, chose as her topic "The Ramparts We Build."

"We must build our ramparts for national security," she stated, adding, "It seems we all feel what might be termed ground swells in American life. We must all be interested in Americanism."

"The healthy sign of our way of life is our anxiety to go forward and not talk of backwards," she pointed out. "We should see that no one says the ten commandments were outmoded, but we must take them out and dust them off once in a while. So with the American life."

She asked, "Have we outgrown our way of life or are we just satisfied as we live?" Maybe we have been so close to American ways of living we haven't realized we have it.

She pointed out we should be self-critical, but not self-content. We should contrast our way of thinking with that of other countries. A country rootless would be like a family with no tradition.

"It's a good idea to dig down once in a while and see if the roots are in good condition," she advised.

She thinks history should be made colorful to make it interesting to students. She related the time she first saw the old copy of the Declaration of Independence.

At first it meant nothing until she realized that "real, common people really held the pen in their hands and really wrote it."

State Domination Perilous "We do not have to apologize for our way of living," she said. "The trouble is lack of understanding of our American system."

The things to understand, she listed as: 1. Right to own property. 2. Free market. 3. Profit and wage incentive. 4. Competition. 5. Government regulation instead of operation.

"The highest standard of the way of living the world has ever known is ours because we created a better way of life," she stated.

"Our danger is of letting state dominate."

"Shall we accept the idea of letting the state make our decisions for us?" she asked. "Where is the definite place where we must stand and fight for our own rights? How many services should the government provide or do for us and which should we do for ourselves?"

She cited roads, power and other programs as things we must have help with, but added it is a temptation to reach out and grab things for ourselves. The most promising thing is to learn the economic facts of life.

Mrs. Taylor is a firm believer that women should run for public office when they are really qualified. The first challenge in voting is to register, then vote. She urged that we "study right now what is on the ballot and know how we are voting."

Coordinator Of Douglas Civil Defense Named

Arthur W. McGuire, Winston, has been appointed as county coordinator of Civil Defense. It was announced today by Gen. J. T. Pierce, county director of Civil Defense.

McGuire will be responsible for the task of setting up and manning some 25 ground observation posts—part of a statewide "Operation Skywatch."

The 25 posts, part of a system that will include some 400 posts in Oregon, will be manned 24 hours daily.

At present, there are two county posts on a 24-hour basis, McGuire said. These are in Roseburg and Reedsport.

The ground observation system is necessary because of an inherent weakness in the Air Force's radar screens, which will not work effectively to detect planes flying under 6,000 feet altitude.

"In our particular country," McGuire says, "we have many valleys in which planes can fly low without detection from the radar network. These would let the enemy in if we didn't have a ground observation system."

Volunteers Needed The new Civil Defense coordinator says he needs all the volunteers he can get for the operation. Several hundred will be needed to man the posts on a round-the-clock basis.

McGuire's main objective will be to organize the nucleus of the operation in various parts of Douglas County. Supervisors in each area will be picked and they in turn will be faced with the task of actually getting the posts in operation.

McGuire is working in conjunction with Air Force personnel in starting the operation. Air Force advisor who covers Southern Oregon is Sgt. Harold Wheatley, of Portland.

McGuire urged persons interested in working on the Skywatch operation to call Civil Defense headquarters in the Courthouse. They also may call him personally at Winston, 9-8442.

W. and Mrs. (Mary) Marshall, Roseburg; four sisters: Mrs. Ida Bowden, Helena, Mont.; Mrs. Effie Bowden, Inglewood, Calif.; Mrs. June Horne, Timmons, Ontario, Canada; Mrs. Blanche Marshall, Great Falls, Mont.; a brother, Charles Morrow, Long Creek, Ore.; a grandson, Thomas G. Savage close-in fighting flared on the Central Front west of the Pukhan River when a company of Chinese tried to capture an Allied hill position.

The hand-to-hand fighting lasted nearly two hours. U.N. troops, stood their ground and forced the Chinese back with bayonets, grenades and fists.
