

Weather Report Shows Hot Sun, Low Rainfall

Reporting the summary of weather conditions at Roseburg for September, 1952, Aels M. Lander Jr., meteorologist in charge at the local weather office, said:

"The average monthly temperature of 67.1 degrees was 4.2 degrees above normal. The highest temperature of 102 degrees reached Sept. 2 was only two degrees below the record maximum of 104 for September. There were a total of nine days during the month that the maximum temperature reached 90 degrees or above. For the 74 years of record, the average for September is only two days; and in the last 22 years this nine day total was equaled or exceeded only twice, in 1944 and 1935. The lowest temperature during the month was 42 degrees, which was reached on the morning of Sept. 13 and 14.

"Measurable amounts of precipitation fell on only three days during the month, and the total of .58 of an inch was 59 below normal. There were 278 hours and 32 minutes of recorded and observed sunshine, which is 74 per cent of the possible. The average in the 22 years of record for September is 68 per cent.

"There were a total of 14 clear days and 5 cloudy days during the month. These figures are very near average for the 74 years. No thunderstorms or hailstorms were observed; and only on two mornings was the visibility reduced to one-fourth of a mile or less in heavy fog."

Physicians Also Lose Battle To Save Infant

CLEVELAND, Ohio — The heart of a two-year-old boy stopped beating for at least 10 minutes, then started up again, doctors at St. Luke's hospital said Tuesday. The five physicians who were trying to save him from strangling on a piece of orange said his heart stopped as they performed two operations on him Monday.

The boy, Demetrius L. Morgan, was put to bed in fair condition Monday night. However, he died early Tuesday. Demetrius was unconscious when his father, Lonnie brought him to the hospital.

First, the physicians made an incision in his windpipe and then a doctor breathed down a tube into the opening to provide air. The piece of orange was lifted out through the incision. Another operation opened the child's chest, and a doctor reached in and massaged the baby's still heart.

Then four or five minutes later, the little organ began beating again.

Prosperity Not 'False,' Stevenson Declares

industrial equipment should rise 15 per cent, railroad equipment 30 per cent and truck manufacture 60 per cent.

Stevenson tore into the Republicans for what he said was the GOP attempt to contend in election years "that they believe heart and soul in all of the things they tried to break." He said Republicans had voted against the interests of the farmers, laborers, businessmen, consumers, housewives, "our children, the old folks and our free friends abroad."

He said the heart of the Republican party is aimed at "abundance for the few with indifference for the mass of people."

"In foreign affairs it leads to indecision and obstruction, with the risk of its grim sequel, war," Stevenson declared. "In domestic affairs, it is always too little and too late, obstruction and mistrust of everything that has been won for the mass of people."

"Now I do not accuse the General Eisenhower of deliberately wanting these things," he continued. "If the truth must out, I haven't the foggiest notion what he as an individual stands for. His views seem to change, as on tidal waves oil, social security, farm price supports, foreign assistance, defense, as he learns more about life in America from his advisers."

Ike Scores 'Whole Hog' Federal Government

Salem, Albany and Eugene, Ore. Last night in Seattle, Eisenhower referred to Truman as "an expert in political demagoguery" giving the people "a course in nonsense fiction." And he called the Truman regime a "whole-hog" government operating on the theory that "the federal government must do everything for us and to us."

The crowd of some 5,000 that jammed the Civic Ice Arena cheered lustily. Eisenhower beamed. An additional 5,000 persons were seated in a high school football stadium nearby, listening to the speech through loud speakers.

The crowd cheered again when Eisenhower said of Truman's attacks against him and the Republicans: "You have been conducted through an underworld of imaginary evils."

He went on to outline his own ideas about the development of Western resources which he said would mean "the full use of private resources plus a local-state-federal partnership" in reclamation programs.

Federal Control Rapped

He turned thumbs down on a federally controlled Columbia Valley authority which would be similar to the Tennessee Valley Authority.

"The present administration's answer to further resource development," he said, "is the valley authority, a kind of super-government blue-printed in Washington, D. C., and manned from there. You don't need more super government."

And then he referred to the "whole-hoggers who want a Columbia Valley authority, a Brannan Plan, and socialized medicine."

Rather than a federal Columbia Valley authority, Eisenhower argued, there should be a "new interstate body" in which state members would have equal authority with federal members in working on irrigation and flood control programs.

Eisenhower jabbed at those he called "the sly apostles of Fair Dealism." And he studied his speech with references to "whole-hog" government.

"By deliberate design," he said, "federal government seeks to freeze out the initiative and energies of local, state and private agencies, whenever it thinks that they are doing anything that infringes upon the swelling federal empire. Thus, the whole-hog mentality proceeds toward the creation of a more extensive and stifling monopoly than our country has ever seen."

Eisenhower asserted that once federal projects are paying for themselves, then local and state government should "take over the financing, take over the projects for their own people, and get their region out of hook to the federal government. . . . To do this we need an administration which believes in keeping government close to the people."
