ride home with her husband, apparently after an argument. She started walking.

Deputies said Mrs. DeBolt had apparently walked about a mile when DeBolt drove by and tried to get her in his car.

An argument ensued and another car drove by with Mr. and Mrs. Lemmons and Myers.

Officers quoted the trio as saying they thought Mrs. DeBolt needed help — though they did not know her personally.

What happened next was not clear, officers said. DeBolt was stabbed several times with a small pocket knife sometime between midnight and 1 a.m., Byrd said.

DeBolt was brought to a doctor at Winston, by a passing motorist whose name police did not learn.

The victim was then taken by ambulance to Community Hospital. At 1:38 a.m. another motorist called state police saying a young girl had told him a man had been hurt and that it "was a matter of life or death."

The Sutherland trio then returned home where they were later picked up Sunday at their homes.

DeBolt was taken to Community Hospital where his condition had been listed as "poor." Death came about 21 hours later, presumably from one of the knife wounds that had struck close to the heart, officers said.

DeBolt is survived by his wife and two children, ages 2 and 5. The body was removed to Roseburg Funeral Home.

The two fatal stabbings bring a five-day total of violent deaths to three. Mrs. Ethel Lucille Bouse, 40, had been drowned in a bathtub Wednesday night, and her husband, Thomas Bouse, 50, was held on a first-degree murder count. He admitted the drowning and his attempted suicide.

Russians Report Attack On Another U.S. Plane

The Soviet state frontier by American aircraft.

Series At Crucial Time — The new controversy is the latest in a series of incidents involving U.S. and Soviet planes in both Europe and the Far East. It comes at a time when American-Soviet relations—as a result of the ouster of U.S. Ambassador George Kennan—are at the lowest point in the 20 years the two nations have recognized each other.

The previous aircraft incidents caused heated diplomatic exchange between the two countries. Kennan also protested July 27 against Soviet Air Day posters depicting three of the incidents and showing American planes going down under Soviet fire. The ambassador refused to attend the annual Air Day show because of the posters.

U.S. Air Force officers in Japan said their last contact with the plane that disappeared Tuesday was a distress call. A crewman was heard to shout, "Let's get the hell out of here," just before the bomber vanished from the radar screen.

At that time, they said, the plane was in Japanese waters flying over the narrow strait between Hokkaido and the Kuriles. Search planes later found an oil slick in the area where the plane disappeared.

Cheer For Stevenson In Victory Forecast

the American Broadcasting Company network last night. It sometimes leads to "temptation to concentrate on large donations," which "does not always serve the public interest," he said.

He called the campaign for $5 donations a "particularly healthy" way of meeting the costs because donors would "ask in return only faithful public service."

In the background of colorful crowd reaction and piercing rebel yells, Stevenson laid it on the line for the Southerners at a speech in Nashville Saturday night.

"Apostates' Scored — His thesis was that the South had everything to lose and nothing to gain by going Republican. He reminded his listeners that Southerners would lose influential committee chairmanships in Congress if the Senate and House go Republican.

He contended in other speeches that the South's progress in the last 20 years had been made possible by enlightened Democratic policies.

He jumped on the "Apostates" and "Mugsumps," he said "obviously lack the courage of their own imported convictions" in urging the South to vote for Eisenhower.

This seemed to classify Govs. Allan Shivers of Texas, James F. Byrnes of South Carolina and Robert Kennon of Louisiana, so far as the Stevenson camp is concerned.
