Jail Breaker Goes Back To View Painting Job

KELLOGG, Idaho — Lyle Peabody is coming back, by demand, to his freshly painted jail. Peabody, 45, held here for extradition to California to face grand larceny charges, offered to redecorate the jail and did a fine job with green and silver paint. Then he skipped out in the fire chief's new sedan without waiting for compliments.

Police Chief Harold Gibson said Peabody has been arrested in Montpelier, Idaho. A woman and a one-armed 10-year old boy were with him. Gibson said the boy apparently was boosted through a window, got the key from the jailer's desk and unlocked Peabody's cell here Thursday night. The car was found slightly damaged, he said.
