Douglas Farmers Apace With Modern Methods

manufacturers of farm equipment have advanced with the demand and are creating the type of farm machinery adaptable to regional areas. In many cases harvesters have supplanted the hand methods and have made the harvests more efficient with less hired labor.
There are 1,552 motor trucks used on the farms in this county for transporting farm products to market and general utility work. Also 1,938 tractors are used for power, and almost every family has an automobile and sometimes two or three.
Hard surfaced, graveled and graded "farm-to-market" roads makes it possible to market farm products at strategic times when prices are at their best. There are 721 of the farms directly located on hard surfaced roads. Graveled and well graded roads are adjacent to 1,542 farms, while only 315 farmers are on dirt or unimproved roads, and these only drive a mile or so to reach graveled or hard surfaced roadways.
The expenditures for operating expenses, machinery and farm needs are made with the commercial and industrial firms located in the various trading centers of the county. Feed for poultry and livestock, last year cost $1,812,000. Gasoline, lubricants and oils cost the Douglas county farmers $355,640. Livestock and poultry purchased by the farmers in the county, to build up or improve their breeding stock for an increase of production and improved quality cost last year $523,855. Seeds, plants and trees brought about the expenditure of an additional $125,130. Tractor repairs cost $131,370 and the repairs for other types of farm machinery caused an additional expenditure of $87,885.
A Substantial Payroll
These figures do not take into account the millions of dollars spent for foods, furniture, appliances, drugs and other consumer needs. The payroll created by the use of hired labor is substantial and last year totaled $79,541 for the work of 364 people, and 2,672 who were family workers. There were 971 people members of the operation families. Roseburg and other trading centers in Douglas county have kept in line with this progress over the years, and have provided adequate schools, church facilities and markets, along with commercial and industrial firms that are equipped to supply every need for the farms and the farm families. Encouragement has been given the farmers and their families to participate in civic activities in all of the commercial centers.
The total cash income from agriculture during the year 1950, according to the United States Department of Commerce, released July 3, 1951, was $6 million dollars, with $1,088,609 coming from crop products sold; livestock and livestock products including dairy products and poultry $4,114,307, and $730,000 from forest products sold by the farmers. When compared with the cash return of 20 years ago, before modern conveniences were provided, of $3,400,000, credit can rightfully be given in a large measure, to the livability of the county.

take precautions to prevent a recurrence of Saturday night's melee.
The council delayed action on renewals of 11 liquor licenses for local taverns and grocery stores until the next meeting. Mayor Flegel and other members of the council said they would wait until after the League of Oregon Cities meeting this week to get ideas on the problem of local control of liquor-by-the-drink permits.
The group passed a motion to address a letter to the Oregon Liquor Control Commission expressing the desire to retain local control over granting licenses to establishments which want to serve liquor by the drink under the ballot measure passed Nov. 4 by Oregon voters.
Flegel said the Eugene City Council was holding up all liquor renewal applications pending a survey of businesses which intend to make use of the new measure. Mayor Flegel said he didn't want to see "any hole in the wall" serving liquor by the drink.
Miscellaneous Business
The council last night also:
1. Granted permission to the State Highway Commission to haul 5,000 yards of gravel from the Umpqua Park bar, pending approval by the County Court, from whom the property is leased.
2. Approved waiver of bond for new business, the Laundromat, a self-service laundry, 110 Court St., by Richard E. Horn.
3. Approved annexation of the First Conservative Baptist Church to the city.
4. Agreed to instruct city officials to remove mud and place gravel on a two-block section of Myrtle Street between Nehalem and Fairview Streets. Councilman Cecil Hugh commented that "that's a muddy so-and-so," and Mayor Flegel added, "that's the understatement of the year—it's just out of this world."
5. Agreed also that a strip of property from the curb to the Senior High school property on the east side of Corey Ave. was also a "mess" because of miscellaneous wrappers and other garbage thrown there. Mayor Flegel suggested the city park commission take over the property and maintain it. No action was taken.

Cloud Seeding Set In Douglas

MEDFORD (AP)—California Oregon Power Co., working with a bare majority of favorable opinion, is ready to resume its winter-time cloud seeding. But it will tell the public, every month, just what is going on.
Last year the company shrouded its snow-producing efforts in secrecy. That A. S. Cummins, president, now calls a mistake.
In the November election the voters of Jackson County decided, by only 31 votes, that they wouldn't ban efforts to alter the weather.
So now Copee will go ahead with its effort to produce more snow on parts of the Rogue-Umpqua drainage area in the hope of producing an adequate water storage run-off.
North American Weather Consultants of Pasadena will do the work, using seven fixed ground generators and one mobile generator. The fixed locations will be at Steamboat in Douglas County; Trail, Tiller, Medford, Ashland in Jackson County, and Rocky Point in Klamath County.

Morse said on a recorded MBS radio show Monday he looks for manufacturers' sales tax.
He said the nation needs tax law revisions to "eliminate inequalities," rather than eventual tax reduction as pledged by President-elect Eisenhower.

THE OLD TRADITION

November is here. Stacks of cornstalks stand in neat rows in the fields. October's riot of colors has given way to a more sober set of browns and greys. In some places snow has covered the ground; other places have seen only a few stray flakes in the grey air. Hozy Indian summer has passed, and the sun is hard to find in Oregon skies.

And November is the time for Thanksgiving. Since 1864, when Abe Lincoln set the fourth Thursday in November aside as a national day of Thanksgiving, we have officially observed a tradition of thankfulness begun by the Pilgrims in 1620.

We have observed another tradition begun by the same people, a tradition of people come to these shores to pioneer for the success they had been denied. All year round we observe this second tradition of pioneering. And we're thankful for the opportunity to pioneer. That means that we're thankful for our customers, who keep coming back week after week. We're thankful for the fine response and cooperation you've given our changes and experiments. We're thankful for the opportunity you've given us to serve you, to bring you the best we possibly could for the least we possibly could. Most of all, we're thankful for the folks who work with us, the folks who share with us the pleasures and burdens which our store pioneering involves.

We, as a Home-Owned and Home-Operated Super Market, are thankful for this opportunity to grow with Roseburg.
