Roseburg's Population May Double In Ten Years

are properly met, first being ideal such larger growth and expansion, ized and then realized by the earnest spirits who do things in a community, then it will advance.

Community growth spells prosperity for it means more building, more capital invested in the community for the development of its natural resources, a better educational program, etc., and a broader view of life. A city that is growing attracts other people to it who come to take advantage of the better things in life that it offers, and who bring with them their accumulated possessions and invest them in the town and its industries. As a consequence every member of the population is benefitted.

Selfishness, if any, is Justifiable

It may be that in this hope of attracting to a community a larger population there is an element of selfishness. What is this particular community's gain is, perhaps, another community's loss but, if Roseburg and Douglas county offer a better place in which to live, the element of selfishness that prompts the holding out of inducements to others to come here and enjoy better things and the opportunities that are offered—is worthy and justifiable.

Emmerson said in effect: "If a man make a better mousetrap than anyone else can make, though he live in a wilderness, the world will make a path to his door." If Roseburg's united efforts and moving spirits will show to the world that this community offers better things than are offered by the average Pacific Northwest community—that is those better things that make life happier—the region will grow and prosper.

In the last four months the Roseburg News-Review has conducted an education program to bring about the pre-vision, unity of thought, and purpose with a survey of the available materials with which to work. The stability of the economy and the wide potentialities that exist here for further growth and development, have been surveyed.

With this issue of the Roseburg News-Review, this feature is terminated. When the anticipated expansion has been experienced and changes come about that might warrant it, the feature may again be inaugurated, showing the advancement that will have been accomplished in keeping with this anticipated expansion.

New Rocket Heads This Way

High in the sky but approaching closer and closer—it's the first released picture of Oldsmobile's 1953 "Rocket"—symbol of the new "Rocket" Engine cars.

LANSING, MICH., Dec. 16—There's a brand new look to what is probably America's best-known "Rocket"—the "Rocket" that means Oldsmobile to millions of motorists.

This all-new, triple-let "Rocket" was revealed today at a special conference in Lansing, Michigan, home of Oldsmobile.

According to Oldsmobile officials, who made the disclosure, the new exciting "Rocket" is the symbol for the 1953 line-up of Oldsmobiles. The new cars will soon be on their way to Oldsmobile dealers everywhere across the country.

Among the many new features to be incorporated in the 1953 models will be a new higher-powered, higher-compression, higher-voltage "Rocket" Engine; new styling throughout; a revolutionary new car cooling system; new braking; and many other outstanding advancements, the officials said.

Local Oldsmobile dealers report that the new "Rocket" are on the way to their showrooms now, and will go on display soon.
