Webfoots To Meet Powerful Seattle Chieftains Saturday

Oregon winds up a rather surprisingly successful home non-conference schedule at McArthur Court Saturday when the powerful Seattle University Chieftains, led by the famed O'Brien twins, go after the Ducks' four-game winning streak.

The O'Briens, a pair of basketball geniuses who have made the Chieftains one of the better independent teams in the country, seem certain to attract one of the largest non-league crowds in recent years. Johnny O'Brien, the "Mr. Points" of 1952, holds almost every scoring record in the collegiate book and is after those he doesn't own at the moment. Eddie, the playmaker and the man who takes up the slack when the defense concentrates on Johnny, is rated by many as the equal of his brother.

Coach Al Brightman of Seattle, who scouted the Ducks last week, predicted after Oregon's win over Portland University it would take "80 or 90 points" for either team to win. He went on to add Oregon was one of the better fast break teams he had seen and the two teams would set an tremendous pace throughout the game.

Coach Bill Borchers' Webfoots, lightly regarded when the season opened, have now broken up three straight winning streaks brought into the "Igloo" by strong opponents. Stanford had won one, Santa Clara two and Portland three when they were upset by the hard-running, hustling Ducks.
