ured in the campaign limelight on a national scale. All the designations must be approved by the Senate.

Hagerty's office said Anderson is a Democrat who described himself during the campaign as a "Democrat for Eisenhower."

The other three men designated today are Republicans.

Anderson is the third Democrat chosen by Eisenhower for a key position in the Republican administration that will take office Jan. 20.

The new appointments were announced as Eisenhower faced a politically-explosive decision in coping with inflation.

Controls Question Posed

The decision confronting him is whether to ask the new Republican-controlled Congress to extend controls authority, scheduled to expire April 30, or let the program die and try to restrain inflation by other methods.

With defense spending certain to remain high, the new administration is taking a cautious approach to the idea of letting wage-price control authority expire.

Spiraling prices and uncontrolled wages could put the Republicans on a political spot they want to avoid. And the Democrats under Truman appear determined to keep the controls program in operation until Jan. 20, when the opposition party will inherit the responsibility for a decision on what to do next.

Rep. Joseph Martin stressed that regardless of whether controls are kept, the Republicans are going to wage a big drive to cut federal spending. That was one of the steps Eisenhower said during the campaign would help curb inflation.

A GOP aim, said Martin, is to "cut some of the extravagance and reckless spending" of which he accused the Truman administration.

He said he wasn't precluding the possibility of a tax reduction, too, but he added that the first business at hand was to reduce spending.

2 Accidents Come To C. Valley Man

By JEAN YODER

Twice in the last four months, Jim Combs, Camas Valley, has stopped his truck to avoid an accident, only to have the accident come to him.

His most recent scrape, netted him three cracked ribs, several bruises and a badly damaged truck.

The accident occurred last week on Highway 32 near the Gene Arnold property in Camas Valley, when a car driven by Milo Claughton Jr., also Camas Valley, apparently went out of control. Two cars preceding Combs were missed by the oncoming car, Combs, seeing the danger, stopped his truck, only to be shoved into the ditch by the careening car.

Considerable damage was done to both the car and truck, both covered by insurance. Claughton was not seriously injured. Combs discovered the three cracked ribs after he had an x-ray taken the following Monday.

In September Combs had a close brush with death when a 10-log load from a lumber truck rolled off the carrier onto his truck. He and his companion, Bud Johnson, escaped injury, but his truck was demolished.
