Pedestrian Has Right Of Way Ruling Of Court

The pedestrian has the right of way once he has started across a traffic signal crossing before the light changes, it was pointed out this week by Ray Conway, manager of the Oregon State Motor Association in keeping the 30,000 members of the association abreast of important recent legal decisions.

The United States Court of Appeals, Conway pointed out, has upheld a Louisiana lower court which awarded damages to a pedestrian who was hit by a taxicab in a situation where he had started across the street on the green light and the light changed to red before he was entirely across.

The case had interesting aspects as the accident occurred about dusk on a rainy afternoon at a scenic highway crossing where a traffic signal lights operated, and the suit was filed against the company insuring the taxicab instead of the taxicab company, as is permitted under Louisiana laws.

In upholding the lower court on appeal by the defendants, the Court of Appeals said:

"A pedestrian about to cross a street, as well as while crossing it, must exercise due care for his own safety in the circumstances and not walk heedlessly into approaching traffic. But, when a pedestrian who has started to cross with a green light in a cross walk marked off for pedestrians is confronted with a change in the traffic signal when he is part way across, thus facing a dilemma, to be instantly decided as to whether he will remain on the center line of the street, or will retreat and run the risk of injury from cars proceeding along the traffic lane he has already crossed, or will attempt to reach the opposite side of the street ahead of an approaching vehicle in the opposite line of traffic, presents a jury question as to whether the pedestrian's conduct in continuing to cross the street was compatible, in the circumstances, with the conduct of a person of ordinary prudence. The pedestrian thus caught in midsection by changing signals, may assume that cross traffic thus released against him will exercise due care, and that he will be accorded reasonable time to reach a place of safety."

New Masonic Officers Seated

Officers of Laurel Lodge No. 13, A.F. & A.M., were installed Wednesday night at a very impressive public ceremony at the Masonic Temple.

Leroy Hiatt, installing officer, and Harold R. Reynolds, installing marshal, invested George Trapp, worshipful master; Walter Brydges, senior warden; Ralph Cooper, junior warden; N. D. Johnson, treasurer; Durward Owens, secretary; William C. Woods, chaplain; Leland D. Bloom, marshal; Loren O'Neil, senior deacon; Joe Wilkoff, junior deacon; Harry Young, senior steward; Robert Caley, junior steward, and Ed Wyatt, Tyler.

Particularly impressive were the vocal numbers by Mrs. Charles Cheffy, the former Christina Trapp, daughter of the new worshipful master, who came from her home at Salem to attend the ceremony. She sang "The Lord's Prayer" with the invocation, and later sang her father's favorite Christmas carols. She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Virginia Young, who later entertained with piano solos.

Incumbent officers presented gifts to Durward Owens, the retiring worshipful master, who takes over the secretary's work for the coming year.

Members and guests, who filled the lodge hall to capacity, were served refreshments in the banquet room at the close of the ceremony.
