Silverside Salmon Migration Hits All-Time High In Umpqua

Silverside salmon migration in the North Umpqua River hit an all-time high record in tabulations for the first two weeks of the month. Bill Pitney, field agent in charge of the State Game Commission's river studies, reports that the 2,755 silver salmon tabulated over the counting board at Winchester is the largest migration since studies started in 1946. The run is now believed to be virtually complete, as past records reveal that few salmon are counted after the 15th of the month.

A few salmon trout continued to move, although total migration is disappointing, being only about one-half that of last year's record.

Winter steelhead are moving at about a normal rate, reports Pitney who lists comparative figures as follows:
