Roseburg Rates High In List Of NW Building

Roseburg has had the highest percentage increase in 47 Northwest cities of building activities in February 1953 over the same month in 1952, according to statistics provided by the Equitable Savings and Loan Association, which keeps track of such things.

Roseburg's February 1953 building has increased 993 percent over the same period in 1952, the statistics show. The increase over January, 1953, is listed at 1081 percent, according to the company's figures. Ellensburg, Wash., with a 2094-percent increase, is higher.

Major projects that brought Roseburg's increase were the remodeling of the F. W. Woolworth store, and construction of the Senior High school gymnasium.

Pacific Northwest building for 1953 is experiencing a fast start compared to last year for the total value of $31,313,574 already permitted. This compares to $25,844,378 for the first two months of 1952, the loan association's statistical department reported.

The better than $4,000,000 lead over Jan-Feb. 1952 placed an optimism on building in the Pacific Northwest's 47 largest cities, which had not been evident in December.

In February the figure for the 47 communities was 6 percent below February of last year, but 10 percent over January's total as follows:

|-----------|--------------|
| Feb. 1953 | $16,368,786 |
| Jan. 1953 | $14,944,788 |
| Feb. 1952 | $16,469,872 |

Dwelling construction in February declined 21 percent below last year but rose 17 percent over January with a total of $7,595,548 for the month.

County Irrigation, Pasture Meets Set Next Week

Two Oregon State College extension specialists will hold meetings on irrigation and pasture management three days next week. The meetings are to be held in Roseburg, Canyonville and Elkton on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Marvin Shearer, irrigation specialist from OSC, is to outline planning procedures for irrigation systems, efficient use of irrigation and use of fertilizers for maximum production.

Irrigated pasture management will be discussed by H. A. Lindgren, animal husbandry specialist. He will examine how to secure the maximum carrying capacity and best results from the forage produced.

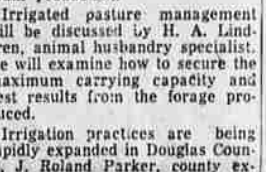

Irrigation practices are being rapidly expanded in Douglas County. J. Roland Parker, county extension agent says. Installation of systems nearly doubled between 1950 and 1953.

During the three-year period, use of fertilizers and soil amendments jumped 167 percent.

New management problems now confront farmers from the increased use of irrigation and fertilizers and the meetings have been scheduled to assist them in making the best use of the newer methods.

The Roseburg meeting will be held in the Knights of Pythias Hall, the one in Canyonville at the Masonic Hall, and at Elkton in the IOOF Hall. All meetings begin at 10 a.m. and thence to Canyonville. He said the Highway Commission hopes to be able to let contracts for this portion of work before fall, as well as for the Winchester-Roseburg and Fairgrounds-Shady Point sections. Money is provided in the new $35 million bond issue approved by the legislature. The other work is already contracted.

A cut of nearly 200 feet over Robert's Mountain is planned, rather than a tunnel as first considered. The highway department doesn't like tunnels, said Edwards, because they are too costly to construct for four lanes, and if built with two lanes, widening in the future is almost an impossibility.

Principal obstacles to highway construction are, he stated, first, cost; second, engineering cost and justification of the expenditure for a particular route; surveys, engineering, rights-of-way, and after a highway is completed, there is often the problem of slides.

Slides are considered calculated risks, but new studies of soils and geologic formation are aiding in this problem.

These, the statement said, had been left in England for servicing when the plane took off for the routine training trip that ended in tragedy. The statement replied to Soviet charges that the Royal Air Force bomber fired on MIG pursuers.

Answering Russian charges that the bomber had penetrated Soviet controlled territory, the spokesman added:

"We have no reason to think that this British aircraft had deviated from the corridor in any material way. A warning would have been fair enough, but outrages of this kind against an aircraft which showed no sign of aggression are unpardonable."

"If the Russian airmen paid a little more attention to gunnery and a little more to navigation these regrettable and deplorable incidents would be less frequent."

County Receives CD Rescue Quota

The Oregon State Civil Defense Agency has suggested a quota of two 24-man rescue units for Douglas County to save lives in case of disaster.

Each unit would be formed around rescue trucks similar to one delivered to the state agency. The truck would contain apparatus used in heavy rescue work: tackle block, power winch, ladders, cross-cut saw, portable floodlights and generator, wrecking bars, gas masks, chain saw, shovels and various hand tools.

The two Douglas County units would be part of 80 being formed by counties throughout the state, according to the State CD Agency. State highway maintenance crews have been organized into 30 24-man crews, in addition.

The suggested quotas were set after the 1951 forest civil defense exercises in Oregon, when a mock bombing attack occurred in Portland. Trained men belonging to highly mobile rescue teams can save the lives of many persons who might otherwise die from injuries, shock and other causes following an air raid, according to Oscar Cutler of the State Civil Defense Engineering and Heavy Rescue Service.

FOR THRIFTY BUYERS

It is our firm belief that much of the credit for the final success of the New City Drive In Market building resulted from the wonderful co-operation and understanding of those involved in the project.

The willingness to accept new ideas must be first acknowledged of the owners, Charles Tidwell, Harold Davidson and Henry Crowdis. Their eagerness "to go along" with many of the ideas we had wished to use, was the first step in achieving the final results.

To Todd Building Company and the many sub-contractors and suppliers, who worked so diligently to translate our drawings into the final building, must go an equal measure of our appreciation.

One man to whom extra credit must be given is the general foreman, Johnny Weber.

To all of these gentlemen, our thanks

To our client, the New City Drive-In Market, our sincerest wish for success in your new building.
