Lee testified before the Senate elections subcommittee in 1951, when Monroney headed it, that he received a $5,000 check from Alvin J. Bentley, now Republican congressman from Michigan, in a casual meeting with Bentley in McCarthy's office.

Lee said he gave the check to Butler's campaign manager who endorsed it over to Lee's wife. Lee said most of the money was used for a postcard campaign in Butler's behalf.

The subcommittee said in its report that the $5,000 was not reported until after it began public hearings and was never reported to the proper Maryland authorities.

Lee told a newsman Sunday he saw nothing irregular about his acceptance of the Bentley check, and added: "I had no responsibility for reporting it."

Sen. Monroney (D-Okla), who was chairman of a Senate subcommittee which criticized the 1950 Maryland senatorial campaign as "despicable," mentioned Lee as being involved in the questioned handling of Republican contributions in that campaign.

Monroney is a member of the Senate Commerce Committee, which normally would act on Lee's appointment by President Eisenhower Oct. 26 as a member of the Federal Communications Commission.

Boy Gives Up Money Claimed By Farmer

EUGENE (AP)—A 12-year-old Eugene boy Monday gave the $575 he found on a street to a man who said he lost it in Eugene two weeks ago.

The man said he was a farmer in the Junction City area, and said he lost the roll when in Eugene, planning to buy some hay.

Garry Morse, 12, found the money downtown two weeks ago. He turned it over to police, but they gave it back to him after no one claimed the roll in a week.
