Reindeer Herder Robbed, But Gets His Money Back

LOS ANGELES (AP) — International note from the police blotter in suburban Sunland:

A reindeer herder from Lapland, hitchhiking, reported he was conked on the head with a vodka bottle by four Spanish-speaking men who had picked him up. They robbed him of $8 and threw him out of the car.

Arnold Blomberg, 28, told officers Tuesday he is from Ivala, Lapland—in Northern Finland—where there are lots of reindeer, and had just arrived in the United States from Australia, where there are no reindeer.

But Blomberg had heard there are plenty of reindeer in the Yellow Knife country of Canada—that's in the Mackenzie Territory—and they might need a good journeyman reindeer herder there.

His visa won't let him work in this country, and the $8 was all he had. As Blomberg finished his story two patrol car officers walked in with four Spanish speaking suspects, whom Blomberg identified. He got his $8 back and, as far as police know, is again headed for the reindeer herding country.

Northwest Schools Get Atomic Research Grants

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — Seven Pacific Northwest schools are doing atomic energy research with grants from the Atomic Energy Commission, the AEC said Tuesday.

The announcement said thus far $2,205,667 has been set aside for the research work at the Universities of Washington, Oregon and Idaho, state colleges of Washington and Oregon, Oregon Medical College and Reed College.

Projects, some of which already have been completed, include studies of the effects of radiation and radioactive materials on aquatic life, absorption of mineral elements in diseased and healthy Western white pine by use of radioactive materials, mobilization of radioactive emitters from bone and development of cyclotrons, the AEC said.
