

Roseburg Artists

MRS. D. L. TAYLOR, above, is the mother of a daughter and son, Carla and Tommy, both students at University of Oregon. Mr. Taylor is a well-known Roseburg building contractor. (Picture by Clark's Studio).

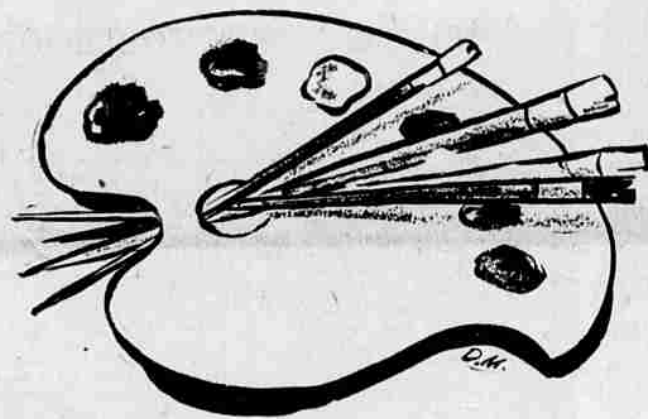

MRS. FLOYD WARNER, above, is a talented musician as well as an artist. Her husband is foreman of roads for logging for Roseburg Logging Co. They have one son, Lester, who is a teacher in the Eagle Point High School. They have two small granddaughters. (Picture by Clark's Studio).

Society

LOTUS KNIGHT PORTER

Sat. Jan. 16, 1954—The News-Review, Roseburg, Ore. 5

THE FIVE ARTISTS appearing on today's society page are prominently known in Roseburg. All five are still studying art by taking special courses. Their enthusiasm for oil painting has been the inspiration for many to take up the study of painting. The five are in much demand to help on numerous projects sponsored in Roseburg, by being called upon to assist with their fine talents.

MISS AMY ROBINSON, right came to Roseburg from Philadelphia to visit relatives and liked it here so well, she remained and is now making her home at 942 Prospect. Before coming here, she was employed as a secretary and also was employed at one time by an engraving firm. (Picture by Clark's Studio).

MRS. JACK WEST, right, stands besides two of the beautiful paintings she made to form a dividing wall between the dining and living rooms of the beautiful new home of the Wests' in Laurelwood. Her husband is associated with West Brothers Jewelry. They have four daughters, Ruth, Charlene, Lorella and Vicki. (Picture by Clark's Studio).

MRS. KENNETH FORD, right, was a school teacher before her marriage to Mr. Ford, who is owner of the Roseburg Lumber Company. They make their home in Laurelwood and have a daughter and son, Carmen and Allyn. Picture by Clark's Studio).

