

Healy Praises Newbry, Lashes Patterson In Talk

hind the secretary of state, and support is increasing tremendously.

The combination of the four, said Healy, has assured Newbry the nomination in the May primary election.

Hits At Dorman A great portion of Healy's talk was directed at Harry Dorman, head of the Dept. of Finance and Administration. Dorman, he maintained, is an appointed official who is "ruining hundreds of business" in Oregon through his purchasing methods.

Healy claimed examples: He charged Dorman has ordered hundreds of gross of pencils from out of state. They can't be used because they won't take a point in a pencil sharpener.

He alleged the department head has let bids on office furniture to out-of-state bidders whose bids were slightly below those entered by Oregon firms. He maintained that Oregon money has been kept from circulating within the state.

He accused Dorman of supplying state institutions with synthetic medicines.

He averred the state is building a $4 million motor pool building in Salem to care for the needs of 30 cars. Secretary of State, state police and State Highway Dept. cars won't be included.

Groups Protest Healy also claimed that many groups in the state have sent delegations to Patterson to protest, but have been brushed off or told that he (the governor) thought Dorman "is doing okay."

All that, holds Healy, is in direct opposition to the beliefs of Newbry. In fact, he added, the secretary of state is opposed to the department, set up only a few years back by the State Board of Control. The latter includes both Patterson and Newbry as members.

Newbry, instead, maintains the governor should shoulder all successes and failures of the administration. The Board of Control is doing it now, he went on.

He also delved into a relationship between Patterson and the third member of the Board of Control, State Treasurer Sig Unander. He claimed it has resulted in an "indecisiveness" on the part of the governor.

The wives of the two are cousins, and this has served to hinder business of the state government, in Healy's opinion. He said not a single contract for building in state institutions has been let by the Board of Control since Unander joined the board in 1953.

As for Newbry's record, Healy said the secretary of state, appointed to that post in 1948 upon the plane crash death of Robert S. Farrell, and re-elected in 1952, never has backed down on a single campaign promise.

Cites Changes He has brought about changes in the secretary's office, including uniform penalties against drunken drivers; the system of branch offices of the motor vehicle division; savings in "tab" licensing of motor vehicles; and school bus laws, his backers said.

Comparing the ideals of Newbry and Patterson, Healy pointed out that Patterson belongs to a very conservative wing of the Republican party; Newbry is a liberal.

The secretary, he claimed, has challenged a Patterson belief that unemployment in Oregon is "normal." Instead, Healy said, Newbry has recognized the need for 600,000 permanent jobs in Oregon now, and one-third more than that in 10 years.

On that basis has Newbry formulated his "build Oregon" campaign. Healy compared states in the East whose industries have absorbed part-time labor on a year-around foundation.

Oregon also has been falling down in the promotion of its third industry — the tourist trade. Tourism, said he, by Californians has been taken too much for granted in Oregon. The California market is Oregon's most important.

E. Hemingways Escape Death In Two Mishaps

ENTEBBE, Uganda, P. — Ernest Hemingway nursed assorted cuts, bruises and burns Tuesday—marks of his latest brush with death in the wild east African bush.

Of his luck, he said: "I think she is running very good."

Hemingway and his fourth wife, the former Mary Welsh, arrived here by car Monday night after surviving two plane crashes in the big game country near the headwaters of the Nile River. Mrs. Hemingway had two cracked ribs.

After a 125-mile trip over jungle and mountain road the novelist climbed out of a motor car clutching a bottle of gin and a bunch of bananas.

"I feel wonderful," he declared. "My shirt was torn, one arm swollen and there was a big patch of adhesive tape on his head."

The first trackup occurred Saturday when the Hemingways—on a five-month safari through East Africa—were flying in a chartered plane near the Murchison Falls. Hemingway said it was caused when their plane dove to avoid a flock of ibises—colorful African birds. It landed on an elephant track through the jungle scrub.

The second crash occurred Sunday. The plane was flying over a swampy area when it struck a tree. The plane was damaged and the Hemingways were injured.

Heavy Storm Causes Power Outages Here

out at 11 p.m., and McGuire said they probably will be out most of today to restore service.

Locally, 19 rural lines in the Roseburg exchange were out of service. So were 20 lines at Sutherlin-Dakland and 13 at Glendale. Glendale was isolated so far as phone service went, McGuire said. Local service may not be completely restored until tomorrow, he added.

Roseburg and Glide got in on the power failure. Mrs. Arthur Selby, News-Review correspondent at Glide, said power was out there for about an hour. In Roseburg, the outage amounted to little more than a blinking of lights.

Bob Hall, Copeo manager at Myrtle Creek, said the Central Oregon outages probably were caused when loads were shifted after the lines, including some poles, collapsed.

Precipitation in Roseburg for the 24 hours ending at 10:30 this morning measured 1.58 inches, according to the U. S. Weather Bureau station at Roseburg airport.

About an inch of slushy snow lay over most of the city in the morning, but soon melted in the sun that broke out soon after dawn.

Glide received four inches of snow; 5 3/4 inches were recorded above the town. Elgarose recorded seven inches.

The weatherman says that more mixed rain and snow is due the area tonight. On Wednesday, temperatures are expected to rise, and rain will fall.

Sections of the Southern Douglas County cities noted the power outage at 5:30, but other sections were out for only about a half hour.

Temperatures in the county were far in the mid-40s, and the precipitation in the lowlands came in the form of rain. Myrtle Creek had about two inches of slushy snow this morning, Mrs. Evans said.

Roseburg low temperature was only 31, and that came after the snow stopped falling this morning. Most of the snow melted as it hit.

The central part of the county was isolated by highway for a time last night.

The State Highway Dept. said that Rice Hill, south of Yoncalla Camas Mountain near Camas Valley; Sexton Mountain and other passes south of the city were closed by snow.

Chains on cars still were advised this morning on Sexton Mountain.

Plows were called into action last night, and routes north and west of the city were opened at about 10 p.m.

The Mothers March on Polio has been scheduled to take place Wednesday evening from 6:15 to 7:15 in Drain rather than Thursday as in other sections of Douglas County. The change of date was made in order not to conflict with the Chamber of Commerce banquet also scheduled for Thursday.

Mrs. Ken Garey and Mrs. Ernest Barker Jr. drive chairmen, with members of the Drain Mothers March at the Drain Grade School Monday to formulate plans for the March. Mrs. Richard Scott was named area chairman, and she announces the fire siren will blow to warn Drain residents that the March has begun. Donors are asked to turn on their porchlights to indicate their willingness to contribute to the drive.

The drive was scheduled in Camas Valley last night, but no reports have come in yet.

Instructions Are Given For Payment Of Taxes The Roseburg office of the Internal Revenue Dept. has requested that checks or money orders for payment of taxes be made payable to "District Director of Internal Revenue."

It was reported that any balance of tax shown to be due at item 7, page 1, of a return on Form 1040 must be paid in full with the return. It should be taken or sent to the Roseburg office, 209 Pacific Building.

Bricker Will Back Down On His Amendment

WASHINGTON, P.—Sen. Bricker (R-Ohio) said today a desire to keep the Republican party from being "torn apart" would lead him to accept a reasonable compromise on altering treaty-making powers in the Constitution.

Bricker disputed President Eisenhower's newly stated contentions that the Ohioan's proposed amendment would (1) make it impossible for the United States to deal with friendly countries on defense matters; (2) strip the President of his historical role as the nation's spokesman; and (3) force American withdrawal from leadership in world affairs.

In a letter yesterday to Sen. Knowland of California, the GOP floor leader, Eisenhower said he subscribes fully "to the proposition that no treaty or international agreement can contravene the Constitution." He would back an amendment to make this clear, he added.

But the President said he was "unalterably opposed" to Bricker's proposal, now before the Senate for debate expected to begin tomorrow, on the ground that "it would impair our hopes and plans for peace and the successful achievement of the important matters now under discussion."

be answered individually by each of the West ministers.

In rejecting the idea of sitting across from Communist China's Premier Chou-En-Lai, Secretary Dulles scolded the Russians for advancing the idea that any great powers have the right to decide all international questions. His speech was a sharp reply to Molotov's attack on the United States Monday at the opening of the Big Four conference.

At the same time Dulles announced acceptance of Molotov's proposed procedure for the conference in order to avoid "weeks in futile argument" about an agenda.

In perhaps the most stinging speech he has made about Soviet policy since he became secretary of state, Dulles accused Molotov of wanting "reversion to a sterile and dangerous past" with his proposals for a German settlement.

"It seems incredible," he told Molotov, British Foreign Secretary Eden and French Foreign Minister Bidault, "that Soviet leaders should now be devoting themselves to reviving... Franco-German hostility and to obstructing a unification which would realize the vision of the wise European statesmen who for generations have been preaching unity as the indispensable foundation for lasting peace."

for a student to make practical use of the facilities was a different story.

Four years ago, Henry Barneck decided to do something about his students' course in English. He outlined his plan to school authorities, and they permitted him to try it on an experimental basis. Barneck worked out the unit in the form of a mimeographed outline requiring use of standard encyclopedic and almanac works available in the school and city libraries. Through the unit, students were taught the practical use of such works by actually using them, together with the catalog system of the libraries.

To illustrate the time and study that went into the work, Barneck checked and outlined 12 separate units of reference books and questions that would require use of each and marked those not available in the city library with a key mark, indicating such material was available only in the school library.

When the Oregon Education Assn. holds its meet in Portland, teachers from all over the state will discuss use of the unit for adoption within their schools.

As the system is set up in the Roseburg school, each classroom class will have a two-week library unit course, included in his first-year English. In this manner, every student can learn how to make practical use of the library facilities available during the time he will most need them.
