McCarthy Hits Stevens' Monitoring Phone Call

his first meeting with McCarthy and their later relations.

For the most part, this testimony was a repetition of what he had said in a formal statement Thursday.

He related that McCarthy proposed to him last September, when Schine was about to be drafted, that Schine be given a special assignment to dig out Communists in the Army.

Stevens said McCarthy said he thought Schine should be made a special assistant to the secretary, or a special assistant in Army intelligence.

This proposition, Stevens said, was made in the Waldorf Towers apartment of Schine's wealthy parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Myer Schine. He said McCarthy invited him to the apartment.

Under questioning from Jenkins, Stevens said he told McCarthy last Nov. 6 that the senator could "drive me out of business" by stimulating headlines creating an impression that espionage was widespread at Ft. Monmouth, N.J.

McCarthy interjected that he wanted the record to show he had "nothing to do with the headlines" or "what newspapers say."

"I'd like to state," Stevens retorted, "that after an executive committee hearing Sen. McCarthy goes out and addresses the reporters, and tells them exactly what he pleases."

the twin targets of charges the committee is investigating.

Olney told the committee that the home repair program financed with FHA-insured loans, has "rapidly become the means by which swindlers, cheats and crooked salesmen have been able to cheat and defraud" unsuspecting home owners.

He said the FHA has been concerned only with keeping its financial records up to date and suffering no monetary losses.

Olney added that the FBI and the Justice Department are now engaged in a great search for fraud and other criminal conspiracies by "suede shoe boys," complete with Cadillac and fancy dress "who bilked a great many thousands" of honest home owners since the repair loan program got started as an anti-depression weapon in 1935.

the President's route between La Guardia Airport and the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, where he spoke.

Approximately 250 policemen were stationed in and around the grand ballroom during his address.

The President disavowed any intention of telling the publishers "how to run your business" but suggested the press could do more to promote domestic unity and international understanding.

More than 2,000 publishers, advertising men and guests applauded when he said, "The press should give emphasis to the things that unite the American people equal to that it gives to things that divide them."

"If proposed laws and policies are described as mere battlegrounds on which individuals or parties seeking political power suffer defeat or achieve victory, then indeed is the American system distorted for us and for the world," he said.

Without referring to current hearings on the dispute between Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.) and the Army, Eisenhower said: "If the day comes when personal conflicts are more significant than honest debate on great policy, then the flame of freedom will flicker low indeed."

The President said there were many misconceptions, fanned by Communist propaganda, between Americans and citizens of other countries.

Quines Creek Road, which makes a junction with Highway 99 south of Azalea, is being widened and straightened, and will, when the other improvements have been made, be blacktopped in the near future.
