St. Paul's Church Festival Service At Hotel Umpqua

St. Paul's Lutheran Church will conduct a special convention festival service Sunday in connection with the Lutheran Laymen's League state convention being held here today and Sunday. The service begins at 10:30 a.m. in the main banquet hall of the Umpqua Hotel. The change in location is being made to accommodate the large attendance of out-of-town delegates and visitors present for the two day convention. The Rev. Richard Z. J. pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church of Sutherlin, will serve as the guest speaker, while the Rev. Walter A. Sylvester, pastor of St. Paul's, will serve as the officiant. The topic of the sermon is "God's Reasoning." Mrs. Florence Perkey is serving as the pianist. Mrs. Kenneth Simon and Miss Nancy Fromdahl will sing the selection "Lord, Teach Me to Pray," by George Graff. The general public is invited to attend this special service. Because of the special convention service the two services ordinarily held at the church on Carey and Military streets, will be dropped for the Sunday only. The meeting of the Sunday School and adult Bible class will also be dropped. Regular services will again be conducted at the church on the following Sunday, May 9, beginning at 8:30 and 11 a.m. with the Sunday School meeting at 9:45 a.m. Holy Communion will be celebrated in the 8:30 service of May 9.

Umpqua Dairy Drops Wholesale Milk Half Cent

Wholesale prices on milk distributed by Umpqua Dairy, Douglas County's biggest local distributor, dropped a half cent a quart today. The announcement was made by Manager Ormond Feldkamp Friday afternoon. He said wholesale cream prices would drop from two to six cents, based on amount of fat type. To be affected are all types of cream, including half and half, whipped cream and light cream. The only type of milk which will not be dropped in price is that containing 4.5 per cent butterfat. Meanwhile, the price to milk producers serving Umpqua Dairy will be 78 cents a pound butterfat and $3.16 per hundredweight based on the new schedule. Umpqua Dairy processes close to 5,000 gallons of milk products a day to be distributed as far away as Elkton, Azalea, Idleyld Park, Camas Valley and Tillier.

Red And Gun Club Building Dedicated

ests on mountain slopes and the problem of getting moisture to these wasted resources is another challenge to us. "We are losing both trees and moisture," contended the chief executive, "with proper management we can get back into the forests and by clearing out the brush and other harmful debris we can save both the forests and the skies' moisture." Patterson explained that the way we can get proper management was to solicit and ask the support of private foresters and timber owners. These professional men can step in with a unified program. He would not like to see the forests fall into the hands of private ownership. Rather, the Federal Government should be equipped with knowledge and information so that it can manage them properly. "We are losing timber more through pestilence and neglect than by the axe and the saw," quoth the governor. Then he summed up the connection between the importance of water to our forests, hence ourselves and the migrating people whom we should receive. Turning to the gubernatorial chores which he stepped into 18 months ago, Patterson merely offered to appreciate the job I am in and find it a tremendously challenging thing. "The governor less modestly cited the effort of "the great team of 15,000 men and women who work for the state." To these people, Patterson gave the bulk of credit for doing the job of preserving our resources. "To these people," the governor continued, referring to the resources agencies, "we can give all the information we have so that they will receive and weigh and then administer in a way beneficial to the people." Outlining three steps for accomplishing the purposes of conservation, Patterson cited defense and appreciation of the state agency workers and the work of each of us in this direction. With this, the governor turned to the value and contributions which individual citizens can make through an organization such as the Roseburg Rod & Gun Club.

Decentralization Of Red Cross Gets Board's Approval

A plan for decentralization of the Douglas County chapter of the American Red Cross has been approved by the board of directors according to Director Robert Allen. The proposal came from Mrs. Curtis T. Beecher. She suggested the setting up of sub-chapters located in communities throughout the county in order to promote local Red Cross activities the year around. A permanent chairman would be appointed in each community to act as liaison between the community and the county chapter. The board also accepted the resignation of Mrs. R. R. Grant as blood recruitment chairman for the Bloodmobile, which will be in Roseburg again May 25-26. She will stay in, however, as vice chairman. Mrs. Walter Brittle, Mrs. Grant was largely responsible last month for the collection of a record-breaking 448 pints of blood in Roseburg. Mrs. R. E. Herman, Red Cross executive secretary, revealed that a senior student at Roseburg High School, Shirley Goodwin, has volunteered services as a secretary in the Red Cross offices after school hours. She will save the chapter $186 a month formerly paid a professional secretary, Mrs. Herman said. Mrs. Herman also reported that 20 per cent of an $8,500 goal in the recent membership campaign has come in. She added, though, that several outside communities still have to report. Chairman Calvin Baird pointed out that the week starting Monday and ending next Saturday will be observed as International Red Cross Week.

as to what should be done to moneys received from sales of timber on them." As to the contentions of the secretaries that the suit actually was against the United States, and the government had not consented to be sued, the majority opinion noted that a 1916 act to determine the extent of grant lands to be recovered from the railroad had been instigated by the government, and added: "Having thus consented, it was a party, and it and all its agents were bound by the court's decision. We think, and hold, that the Secretary of agriculture and all other government officers were and are bound to recognize and abide that court's findings." Judge Henry W. Edgerton, in his dissenting opinion, said he felt to be "erroneous" the majority's premise that Congress authorized the district court in the 1916 case to decide whether the 472,000 acres had been granted to the railroad.

Glide Students See Authentic Indian Dances

By MRS. ARTHUR SELBY
The National School Assemblies presented a program Wednesday morning at the Glide High School auditorium by a group of Indians who featured tribal dances in authentic costumes. The Glide grade school students and the Deer Creek grade students were permitted to attend this exceptional program. National School Assemblies series consists of five programs given at all high schools during the school year. Mr. and Mrs. Vern Caldwell and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Johnson of Eugene were weekend guests at the Oscar Steadman home on Little River Road. Mr. and Mrs. Orville Reese drove to Eugene last Sunday to visit Mrs. Reese's father, James Digham, who is seriously ill at the Eugene Convalescent Home, and requires 24-hour nursing care. The student body of Glide High School elected the officers for the 1954-55 school year last Friday. Officers chosen were: Duke Bevin, president; Anita Watkins, vice president; Jacquelyn Biss, secretary; Linda Baker, treasurer; and Pat Halford, sergeant-at-arms. Supt. Byron Evans will leave Monday to participate in a study to determine characteristics of successful school administrators at the University of Oregon. The study class will be a two-day session.

Mundt To Try To Speed Up Senate Hearing

WASHINGTON — Sen. Mundt (R-SD) said today an attempt may soon come to shorten the public probe of the flaming dispute between Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis) and his aides and top military officials. Mundt, chairman of the Senate Investigations subcommittee during the televised inquiry, said the hour may shortly be at hand for efforts to narrow the issues that have now been pitted before the senators in seven days of under-od hearings without signs of let-up. Secretary of the Army Stevens, who first took the witness stand the opening day, April 22, was still there when the group recessed for the weekend yesterday, although several others have testified for brief interludes. Stevens was listed for another appearance Monday. As the hearings closed yesterday, Ray H. Jenkins, special staff committee counsel, drew from Stevens an acknowledgement that when the Army secretary was thinking of relieving Maj. Gen. Kirke B. Lawton from command at Ft. Monmouth, N. J., he so informed McCarthy "to find out how Sen. McCarthy felt about it."

Carson Stresses Need For New Developments

ished products at home, primarily the furniture, aluminum, carbonium, chemical and knitting fields. And the most important feature of Oregon's economy, Carson said, is electrical power augmented with natural gas. He pointed out that "20 years of successful administration in which the great power resources of the Columbia River were being developed" has now been brought "to an abrupt end." "Talk of 'partnerships' in public power is all 'very nebulous' and leaves things 'more or less in a state of confusion.' He confessed, "I don't know where we are." The speaker lashed out at "discriminatory freight rates," both within the country and along the coast. "The capital will not invest in Oregon, he maintained, without abundant power, fair freight rates and an equitable tax structure. Higher freight rates for east-bound goods than for west-bound goods is a great deterrent to west-coast industrial development. Carson said. The condition of coast-wise shipping is "tragic," with trade having fallen off "to about nothing," the former member of the U. S. Shipping Board said. "Hovering over the picture is the fact that 'something must be done to replace the timber that is being lost in the next few years of our timber economy.' He asked his audience to forget about the individuality of political candidates and look to the preservation of Oregon's future for all the people. The candidate was introduced by Fred Nege, captain of coast of Oregon." Flege also introduced several other candidates and party workers.

Elkton's Henderer Road Widening Nears Completion

By MRS. C. W. HENDERER
The construction on Henderer road is being completed this week. The project which has been in progress since last December consisted of widening the bluff for two and three lane traffic.

Accepts Position
Cecil Denney has been hired as custodian of the Elkton Grade School to replace Wallace Fout, who resigned. Chicken pox and mumps are still very active in the Elkton area. A high percentage of students are absent from school because of them. Mrs. H. J. Weigel of Harbor is spending the week at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. W. Henderer.

366 Persons X-rayed
The chest X-ray unit served 366 people of the Elkton vicinity, during its visit April 27. This was three more than the total of 363, two years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Solomon and Mrs. Robert Chappell of Priest River, Idaho, returned to their home this week after spending the week at the Charles Solomon home. Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Weatherly were dinner guests last Friday evening at the C. G. Henderer home. Mr. and Mrs. Dick Willey and family spent last Sunday visiting

County Students Dominate Ticket In SOC Election

Two Roseburg students at Southern Oregon College are currently campaigning for president of the student body. Nominated this week for the office were Durward Boyles, 1950 graduate of Roseburg High where he was student body president, and Chuck Plummer, 1951 graduate of Roseburg High. Plummer is sports editor of the college newspaper and a letterman in several sports. He is a former correspondent in sports for the News-Review. These two will run against Jim Kennett, Medford. Douglas County residents are also sprinkled liberally among candidates for other offices at the college. It's a preponderant Douglas County race for first vice president where Norma John, Winston, and Jim Ylvisaker, Roseburg, are in the race with Kennett. Contending for second vice president is Darrell Keeney, Roseburg. Also in the race are Kennett again and Chuck Quinowski, Klamath Falls. Mary Ellen Holbrook, Roseburg, is the county's candidate for secretary. She is running against Terry Barr, Medford. The posts of treasurer and yell leader are the only two not having county students on the slate. Two county boys are up in the race to fill the four posts of representatives-at-large. They are Les Cingrade, Roseburg, and Norman Ostling, Drain.

County May Get Million From O&C Lands Fund

see no bad effects from it at all" if the court decision does not affect the progress of bills introduced in Congress by Rep. Harris Ellsworth and Sen. Guy Cordon. The bills are designed to solve both the problem of fund distribution and long-range management of O & C lands, the judge said. The action is backed by all O & C counties except Clackamas as the best method of ending the long dispute. Hill reiterated that he sees no reason why the O & C counties should be pleased with the court decision to distribute the funds now, but emphasized that good management for years to come is more important and must be established by an act of Congress. "No damage has been done to our cause," the judge believes, because the court decision settled one of the things the O & C association wanted settled, even though in a different way. This is assuming, of course, that the court decision provides a final distribution of the money from the 472,000 acre Judge Hill explained, after reading news reports on the decision. The decision could "leave us in the position we are in now," Hill said, with O & C and national lands side by side in alternate sections. This situation creates a "roadblock to the great stands of forests" because of the fact operators can afford to build roads into large blocks of timber only. This "roadblock" would be solved by the Ellsworth and Cordon bills, the judge believes, and the bills provide that distribution of funds from the timber would be under the present ratio of 75 per cent to the counties and 25 per cent to the federal government. In addition to the controverted lands, the Department of Interior, through the Bureau of Land Management, handles about two and one-half million acres of O & C land not in dispute. Friday's court decision on the lands in controversy will mean more than one million dollars for Douglas County coffers. There is about seven million in the fund, with 75 per cent going to the 18 Oregon counties. Douglas County will receive the largest cut, 27.25 per cent of the counties' share. Of much more importance to the county, the judge believes, is future revenue from a stable, sustained management of tim-

Clemmie Ethel Prock Of Camas Valley Dies

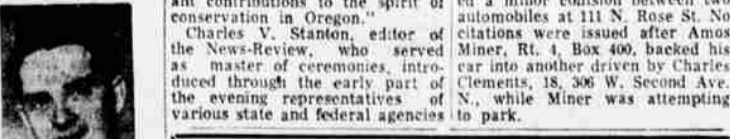

Clemmie Ethel Prock, 70, lifelong resident of Camas Valley, died Friday, April 30. She was born Oct. 21, 1883, in Olalla to pioneer parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bushnell. She was preceded in death by her husband, Clarence A., on Oct. 22, 1953. Surviving are a brother, Edmond Bushnell, Salem, and a sister, Mrs. John (Edna) Standley, Camas Valley. There are numerous nieces and nephews surviving in this community. Funeral services will be held in The Chapel of the Roses, Roseburg Funeral Home, Monday, May 3, at 2 p.m. The Rev. Martin Love of the Christian Church of Winston will officiate. Interment will follow in the Tenmile Cemetery.

ber. "The timbered counties," he said, "are very, very highly dependent upon proper management of their timber resources." He maintains the bills now in Congress will assist greatly in reaching stable management in the years ahead.

YOUR BODY

ROSEBURG, OREGON — These health articles are written and paid for by Dr. B. A. SMITH, Chiropractic and Naturopathic Physician, 1500 Garden Valley Road, in the interest of public health and to help you understand the body function. Look for these informative articles every Saturday.

Children and adults also, frequently are victims of convulsions. Convulsions are usually due to one of two groups of infections. Disease of the brain or spinal cord resulting from a bacterial infection, as in meningitis, hemorrhage into the brain, tumor of the brain or spinal cord, abscess of the brain, embolism or thrombosis may lead to convulsions. Functional disorders, caused by food or vitamin deficiency, may result in convulsive seizures of children. The common example of this form of convulsion is seen in the condition known as tetany, of which calcium deficiency in the blood stream has been determined to be the cause. Other functional convulsions are those which occur with stomach upsets, those due to absorption of toxins from the blood in kidney disease such as uremic poisoning, and a form of convulsion sometimes seen prior to asphyxiation during a coughing and choking spell in whooping cough. During an attack of whooping cough there may be an actual hemorrhage into the brain which is the immediate exciting cause of the convulsion. Convulsions are also seen in lead poisoning, and associated with enlargement of the thymus gland. Hereditary factors are also of importance, for instance in the development of epileptic seizures. While death may occur during such an attack, it is very rare for death to occur during the first attack of convulsions. The beginning of a series of convulsions is usually characterized by restlessness and twitchings of the muscles of the face, hands or feet. Sometimes the attack may come on without any warning whatever, and the first thing that is noticed is that the face becomes pale, the eyes appear to stare, or they may roll upward. Muscle twitchings then begin, first in the muscles about the eyes and face, then extending downward to involve the arms and legs. Only one side may be involved. There may be frothing at the mouth with loss of consciousness. The victim may be covered with a cold perspiration, rattling sounds may be heard from the throat. There may be involuntary emptying of the bladder and bowels. The strength and energy involved during a series of convulsions is often tremendous, requiring several persons to subdue or hold a person suffering from an attack. The treatment of course depends upon the cause of the convulsion, which may be difficult to determine. (Adv.)
