Four Communists Are Sentenced

ST. LOUIS — Four Communists were sentenced to five years imprisonment and a fifth was given a three-year prison sentence Friday by U.S. District Judge Roy W. Harper for conspiring to advocate overthrow of the government by force.

Sentenced to five years in prison were William Sentner, 49-year-old former labor organizer and long-time Communist Party worker; Robert Manewitz, 37, party educational worker; James F. Forest, 43-year-old Missouri State Communist Party chairman, and Marcus A. Murphy, 44-year-old Negro, who was the party's candidate for lieutenant governor of Missouri in 1940.

Forest's 39-year-old wife, Dorothy, was sentenced to three years in prison.

The five have been free on bond since their conviction Friday. The jury, which heard 46 days of testimony, setting a record for federal court here, took only two hours and 15 minutes to reach a verdict.

The five were indicted here in the fall of 1952 by a federal grand jury on the charge they had violated the Smith Act.

AFL Strike Deadline Announced As June 20

thorization was called to a Portland meeting Monday.

In a joint statement, A. F. Hartung of the CIO and Kenneth Davis and Joe Hazard, Northwest and California AFL secretaries, said that if a strike were called, each union would help the other in any way possible, would not raid the other's membership and would respect picket lines.

"The unions know they have been pushed around by the employers for the past two years because they are the only unions in the lumber industry which have not operated as one union," the statement said.

This was in reference to failure to win pay increases either this year or last. Only Weyerhaeuser of the major operators gave any boost—and no big operator has yielded this year.

Lumber workers have not been united in dealing with employers since a large group broke away from the AFL 17 years ago and formed the CIO lumber union.

After failure of the last of the negotiating sessions to find a meeting ground, C. L. Irving, manager of the PIRC, said "there is no development in the economy of the lumber industry that would justify any cost increases."

While studies in allergy have been going on for forty or more years, a considerable number of allergic conditions are still poorly understood. However, sufficient evidence is now at hand to place the subject in proper relation to diseases formerly believed to be of distinctly different origin.

Allergy is the name given to the sensitivity of an individual to a specific substance, after previous exposure to that substance. Such previous exposure may make the individual more sensitive. It is sensitive, or completely insensitive or immune to that substance.

Allergy is closely linked to the phenomenon of immunity to disease. It is also closely linked to susceptibility to such common diseases as hay fever, asthma, migraine, and eczema. With respect to eczema, sensitivity to food, pollen, drugs, cold, heat, chemicals, etc. may all cause skin rashes whose origin formerly were baffling.

Allergy is now considered to be responsible for many diseases of the eye, nose, throat, lungs, and skin. Some of the diseases of childhood are definitely related to allergy, especially in cases of infantile eczema.

An allergic reaction may be local, general, or both. The formation of hives is an example of a local reaction which is familiar to many individuals. The general reaction, for example, is that of shock, increase in pulse rate, and fever. Serum sickness, often seen in children several days to two weeks after the injection of an antitoxin, is an example of both a general and a local reaction. The hives of serum sickness may burn and itch for as long as three days.

Specialists in allergy consider an individual is allergic when he shows an hereditary background of allergy, such as a history of hay fever or asthma in the parents, and when one obtains relief when the allergic substance or allergen is avoided, and all of the symptoms recurring as soon as the individual is again exposed to that allergen. It appears that a previous contact with the allergen is absolutely necessary before the condition of allergy can prevail.

Hereditary factors are important in the consideration of allergic reactions. This condition is brought about by placental transmission or before birth. This may explain the immunity of infants to most of the children's diseases in the first year of life.—Adv.

Communist Associations Involved In Oppenheimer Decision By Loyalty Board

by JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON — You could suit yourself about associating with a long-time Communist friend if you worked in a department store. There's no law against it. The boss might fire you if he found out. But you'd still be free to take that chance.

Suppose, though, you were one of the great atomic scientists, working for the government, and carrying around in your head secrets involving national security. Would you then be free to associate with that long-time Communist friend?

That's one of the points in the decision which found Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer loyal but a security risk.

Oppenheimer, director of the wartime atom bomb development and a government consultant afterwards on atomic problems, was told last December he could no longer have secret information.

Oppenheimer asked for a hearing to clear his name. The five-man Atomic Energy Commission appointed a special, three-man board to consider his case. It did, for weeks. It heard 40 witnesses and read 6,000 pages of testimony and evidence. This week it gave its verdict.

It not only found him to be loyal but said he had a high degree of discretion and a great ability to keep secrets. Nevertheless, the board ruled he should no longer be entrusted with government secrets. In short, it called him a security risk.

Oppenheimer became director of the bomb project in 1942. Before then, he associated with Communists for years, attended Communist meetings, married a Communist and had a brother and sister-in-law who were Communists. His wife, brother and sister-in-law said they quit the party before 1941.

Sen. McCarthy Recall Petition Names Lag

(D-Mo) shortly before the Army filled its "pressure charges against McCarthy and his aides, as saying allegations of preferential treatment for Gen. G. David Schine "were very much exaggerated." The Army's formal charges accused the McCarthy camp of seeking by improper means to win special privileges for Schine, a former consultant to the investigations subcommittee headed by McCarthy.

The calls also disclosed that Symington joined forces with the Army side at one point in the dispute before it got to the hearings stage.

Symington was quoted as advising Stevens to seek advice from Clark Clifford, a former top aide to President Truman, and as telling Stevens that Deputy Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers was "one other fellow that is on your side."

The Missouri senator gave this explanation as the content of his transcribed discussions with Stevens came to light.

He had willingly taken "sides" with the Army in an effort to help stop McCarthy's reported abuse of Army witnesses; that he had not talked to any principals in the case outside the hearing room once the subcommittee took on its investigations; and that he did not know if Stevens ever went to Clifford.

Rogers, already named in McCarthy's contentions that administration officials outside the Army had a hand in the case, said in a speech at Willamette College, last night, that "there are many more important things" to attract the attention of the American people than "these congressional hearings." He refused comment as to which of the two battling groups he sympathized with.

Rep. Davis Says He Saw Bullet Coming At Him

WASHINGTON — Rep. Davis (D-Tenn) told his cane against the witness chair Friday and declared, "I saw the bullet coming toward me that got me."

Davis, one of five congressmen wounded in the March 1 shooting in the House of Representatives, identified Rafael Cancel Miranda as the man who shot him.

The 25-year-old Cancel and three other Puerto Rican nationalists are on trial on five counts each of assault with intent to kill and five counts each of assault with a deadly weapon.

Davis, lead-off government witness at Friday's second session of the trial, was followed to the witness stand by Rep. Graham (R. Pa.). Graham was not wounded but testified he saw the whole thing.

Graham, a pink-faced and gray-haired man, arose dramatically from the witness stand and aimed a finger at the four defendants. He singled them out and called them by name.

Remaining standing, the portly Graham twisted and turned and fired imaginary bullets as he gave his graphic description of the shooting. He said Mrs. Lolita Lebron, 34-year-old a self-described leader of the group, caught his eye as she leaned to her feet, let out a scream, waved a banner and commenced firing.

"What impressed me at the time was the snarl on her face," Graham said.

ODM Declines To Promote Expansion Of Aluminum

WASHINGTON — The Office of Defense Mobilization (ODM) has decided not to promote the long-delayed, 200-million dollar "third round" expansion of the aluminum industry government informants reported Friday.

A ODM spokesman declined to verify the report but said an announcement on the proposal, which has been pending for more than a year, can be expected within two or three weeks.

Other sources who asked not to be named, said the expansion proposal which would increase the nation's aluminum producing capacity by 240,000 tons or more than 15 per cent will not be pushed for several reasons.

One reportedly is a reappraisal of military demands, said to indicate that less aluminum will be required for planes than had been estimated. Another is an improved rapid stockpiling of the metal.

Another new factor is an assurance of substantial imports from Canada. The recent settlement of an anti-trust action against Aluminum Co. of America (Alcoa) will permit Aluminum Co. of Canada to carry out contracts under which 786,000 tons of Canadian metal will be sold to major American aluminum companies.

ODM is not expected to close out its defense expansion goal for the domestic industry. This would mean that new companies still could obtain federal tax benefits to assist them in financing plant construction.

However, it is understood that ODM's ruling will bar any special help such as long-term government purchase contracts, defense loans, or government guarantees of private loans.

Early last year three companies had announced their decision to enter the aluminum field in the third round of expansion, even though the country's capacity was scheduled to be doubled under two previous defense expansions.

The firms were the Harvey Machine Co. of Torrance, Calif., which evidently is going ahead with its plant on the Columbia River in Oregon; Olin Industries, Inc., at East Alton, Ill., and the Wheelabrator Co. of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Tax Commission's Authority May Get Court Test

CORVALLIS — The State Tax Commission Friday ordered the Benton County assessor not to reduce assessed valuations on old growth timber. The order may lead to a court test of the commission's authority.

The county board of equalization Thursday placed a valuation of $1.20 a thousand on old growth timber. That is 20 cents more than last year's evaluation, but less than the $1.75 established by the commission. Timber owners asked a reduction contending they were being discriminated against.

The commission set the $1.75 valuation after Assessor Emile Larkin asked the state agency to reassess all Benton County property. Sam Stewart, a member of the commission, said the state agency could go into a county on request, but once it had established valuations, the figures could not be upset by a county group.

Timber owners said that adjacent

PUD Resolution Opposes Partnership Proposal

OLYMPIA — A resolution opposing a "partnership" plan for construction of the 461-million-dollar John Day Dam on the Columbia River was scheduled to go before the semi-annual meeting of the Washington Public Utility Districts Assn., here Saturday.

The association's Policy Committee Friday approved a draft of the resolution, which called the John Day proposal by Sen. Cordon (R-Ore) a "radical departure" from existing methods.

Association leaders predicted the resolution would get the near unanimous approval of the association members.

The resolution said the PUDs believe "that the John Day project should preferably be constructed with low-cost public financing and that power be marketed on a regional basis under the anti-monopoly provision of existing federal statutes."

Samuel Schwartz Named New Post Office Head

WASHINGTON — Samuel Schwartz, formerly of Cottage Grove, Ore., will be head of the regional post office to be established in Portland, Sen. Guy Cordon (R-Ore) reported Friday.

The new office, which will supervise postal operations in Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana and Alaska, is tentatively scheduled to be in operation June 30.

District offices, to be established at Portland, Seattle, Spokane, Boise, Butte and Anchorage, will be supervised by the regional office.

Schwartz, who joined the postal service in 1921 at Cottage Grove, served at Kansas City, Mo., Eugene and Salem, before going to Portland in 1946.

He was Army postal officer for the European Theater during World War II.

McCarthy Says Phone Calls Scuttle Army Case

SAUK CITY, Wis. — Leroy Gore, instigator of a recall drive against Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis.), says if the movement fails to get enough signatures by tonight's deadline he will start a similar campaign after the November elections.

Gore, editor of a weekly newspaper here, said that as of Thursday his "Joe Must Go" campaign had 35,000 of the 403,800 signatures needed by midnight tonight when the 60-day drive ends. He pointed out, however, that 88,000 of the signatures had been invalidated when the dates of the drive were rolled forward almost three weeks.

McCarthy has refused to comment specifically on the recall campaign. He has told his supporters to "pay no attention" to it.

"I don't want anyone spending any money opposing," McCarthy has said.
