Jimmy Roosevelt Strength Pends

SAN FRANCISCO — Voting was light in the morning hours — except in the Los Angeles area — as Californians wrote the climax to a generally routine primary election campaign.

The high-spot of Tuesday's election was the race of James Roosevelt, eldest son of the late President. He pitted the political power of his once-magic name against scandal charges — and nine opponents — in his campaign for a seat in Congress from Los Angeles.

The registrar of voters in Los Angeles said balloting was "clicking right along" in the pre-noon hours. The skies were sunny there. Reports from other quarters of the state said morning voting ranged from "light" to "very light."

A U. S. senator, 30 congressmen, a governor and other state officers were on the ballot.

Wet Weather Hits Continent

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Windy and wet weather hit the mid-continent again Tuesday.

The vigorous storm center that moved northward through parts of Minnesota and the Dakotas Monday was north of the border Tuesday but it continued to give strong westerly winds to North Dakota. Gusts to near 50 m.p.h. hit Minn., N.D., accompanied by some rain. However, rain had ended in most of the northern plains.

It was mild and skies were clear in the southeast quarter of the country. There were scattered showers along the East Coast, mainly in sections of New England. Other wet spots were in extreme Northern California and Western Oregon, extending into the Northern and Central Rockies.

Some early morning reports: Minneapolis 81 and clear; New York 78 and partly cloudy; Miami 77 and clear; Seattle 51 and clear; Denver 53 and partly cloudy; San Francisco 53 and partly cloudy; Indianapolis 73 and cloudy; Des Moines, 61 and clear; Chicago 70 and cloudy.
