WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Housing Administration Thursday fired Burton C. Bovard, its general counsel who refused to resign after investigations were started into windfall profits from government-backed housing construction.

Bovard has been on leave since May 7. Norman P. Mason, acting FHA commissioner, charged that Bovard had "failed to carry out the functions of his office satisfactorily."

Mason said at the time he had uncovered "no evidence of illegal activity" by Bovard.

Californian Purchases Oakland Shopping Center

The Little Giant Shopping Center at Oakland has been sold to a Californian, reports Oakland Correspondent Edith Dun.

The general merchandise store was formerly owned by Ben Martin. It has been sold to Gerald Lee Egnew from California. One of the projects of the new management is repainting of the store front.

Another change is the name. In the future, the store will be known as the Oakland Shopping Center.

The store was owned for a number of years by R. D. Bridges before it came into the hands of Martin. Martin sold out to spend more time with other business interests in Los Angeles, where he has now gone.
