

Washington Convicts End Hunger Strike; Supervisor Says Some Demands To Be Met

HUNGER STRIKERS—Three of the 1,500 inmates of the Washington State Prison at Walla Walla who went on a hunger strike Tuesday are shown in their cell reading and listening to their radio just before the strike broke Thursday. Inmates gave many reasons for the strike. The warden biated illness. (AP)

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP)—When John Cranor retires Sept. 1, State Penitentiary inmates picked up their normal routine today and the man who will be their warden said the "situation is in complete accord" after a three-day sit-down and hunger strike.

But Lawrence Delmore Jr. warned trouble still is possible among the nearly 1,500 convicts after their 72-hour fast.

The sit-down, which started among laundry workers Monday noon and in the next 24 hours spread throughout the prison, ended suddenly Thursday afternoon.

The prisoners said they were accepting assurances of Fred Dickson, supervisor of state institutions, that some of their demands would be met, and were led off to their first meal—fried eggs, fried potatoes, fruit, bread and coffee.

Delmore will become warden

Truck Crash Frees Cows; Herd Dashes In Streets

PORTLAND (AP)—Eleven cattle roamed the range of S. W. Main St. and points west Thursday, and it was hard to tell whether the cattle or the city dwellers were more alarmed.

Both sides began running after the cattle were dumped into the streets in a truck accident.

The cattle were trying to get out of the way of police and amateur cowboys who were chasing them. The rest of the city dwellers were trying to get out of the way of the cattle, who clopped wildly down Main St. and then branched off into various sections of the downtown area.

Five turned into a secluded-looking spot, and found themselves in the black-long tunnel of The Oregonian. Startled newspaper workers leaped for the leading platforms as the cattle galloped through to emerge on another street.

One maverick charged into an automobile agency, and up a ramp into the repair shop. Mechanics scattered as the animal clattered about, banging the closely parked cars. Cornered in a wash rack, the writer jumped over a man, spearing a windshield off a sports car.

A score of employees and police finally roped the animal, everyone getting bruised in the process.

Five others made it completely through the business district and burst into a garden party at the home of Mrs. Sam Hoover. Amid screams, the five women there scattered.

Right behind came Patrolman Robert Jones, who took advantage of the cattle's momentary confusion to lasso one of the animals. That one immediately took off, dragging the determined but un-

Melrose Early Settlers, Kim Schedule Meets

By NETTIE WOODRUFF

The Bunkerake relatives will meet their annual picnic at Drain August 3. The Bunkerakes settled in this county first in 1852 and again in 1882.

Comm. Meet

The Henry Conn relatives and descendants will meet at Umpqua Park Aug. 3 at 10 a.m. for their annual picnic and to celebrate the centennial anniversary of the Umpqua Valley. They crossed the plains and settled at Melrose in 1854, then known as French settlement.

Royce Bunkerake, accompanied by Walter Thurlow of lower Garden Valley went to Winchester Bay Thursday, where they went deep sea fishing. They report they had caught three salmon.

Mr. and Mrs. Eli Sanders had as house guests last week, Mr. and Mrs. John Carney from Phoenix, Ariz., and his mother, Mrs. Fannie Carney, of Santa Cruz. They were returning from Albany, where they had visited the Carney's son, the Rev. J. D. Carney. This was their first visit to Oregon. They were neighbors in Oklahoma and the families had not met for 20 years. Mrs. Fannie Carney was Mrs. Sanders' Sunday school teacher there when she was a girl.

Tour Coast

Mr. and Mrs. O. O. Matthews went to Winchester Bay Friday afternoon and in the evening were joined by Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Woodruff of Garden Valley. On Saturday the two couples drove up the coast to Yachats, stopping at different points of interest, among which were the Sea Lion Caves, and the Massey fuchsia gardens at Florence. The Matthews have 175 different varieties of fuchsias. The group returned to the bay in the evening and visited with Mrs. Eva Marks and her sister, Mrs. Nellie Myers. They also visited Mr. and Mrs. Louie Nichols and Mr. and Mrs. Lew Holman at Reedsport. They are all former Melrose residents. The Matthews stopped in Coos Bay Sunday afternoon to visit Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Brown, and at Coquille, where they visited Matthews' cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hol-
