NEUBERGER AND LINCOLN

Charles V. Stanton

State Senator Richard L. Neuberger is a prolific writer. He has a good knowledge of journalism and editing. Dick, who aspires to the U.S. Senate and the seat now held by Senator Guy Cordon, together with his running mate, Attorney Charles Porter, who is after Representative Harris Ellsworth's job, have developed to a fine degree a good political stunt.

Whenever they are mentioned critically, either in an editorial or news item, Neuberger and Porter immediately write a letter to the editor.

They know that most editors are anxious to preserve the right of free speech and will deny no one the opportunity to express himself in the newspaper's forum column if the communication is at all usable. They know too that most editors will give space to any letter criticizing the editor, his policies or opinions.

Reading the Oregon newspapers coming to our office, we find Neuberger, in particular, to be quite busily engaged in letter writing. Porter, being a candidate only in the Fourth Congressional District, has less opportunity for display of literary talent, but he does quite well for the limited field available to him.

We note the letters are becoming more or less formalized and it won't be long until the overworked secretaries of the two candidates will need only to select Form No. Umptenth to meet any given situation.

Hard On Publishers

The letters we have observed usually contain a few paragraphs devoted to the particular point or points of disagreement, then proceed with a stereotyped exposition of the political theories of the candidates, attacks on their opponents and the highlights of campaign propaganda.

Their letters, in fact, are nothing more or less than political advertisements. They have refined the publicity racket to the nth degree, obtaining a lot of free advertising by taking advantage of editorial insistence upon the right of free speech.

While gathering column after column of free publicity and advertising by means of their letter writing dodge, the two candidates are walling piteously about the money their Republican opponents will have available to spend on paid advertising.

It's a hard situation on publishers, who look to paid advertising space for their profits, to have their editors (excusing their conduct on the basis of ethics) giving away space for material which consists largely of free political advertising. Maybe that's the reason so many publishers are Republicans.

Why The Objection?

Neuberger seems to be much offended to be dubbed a Socialist.

If a candidate advocates socialistic theories and policies, and attacks his opponent because of a voting record against socialistic theories and policies, why should he object to being called a Socialist?

Dick, who likes to link his name with Teddy Roosevelt and Charles McNary, has been most vociferous about the "McKay give-away."

Time magazine in its current issue, pictures Secretary of the Interior McKay on its cover and discusses him and his job in a feature article.

Speaking of McKay's policies, particularly private initiative on electric power and more private ownership of public lands, Time says:

On the last named point of this program, McKay has a good historical precedent. In the 19th century, Interior's General Land Office did a land-office business virtually giving away land for railroads, land-grant colleges and, mostly, homesteading. Lincoln, who made homesteading the law, believed in "settling of the wild lands into small parcels so that every poor man may have a home." The theory was that the people would work the land, build up the nation and make it great. In the 20th century came a new idea: The Federal Government should build up the nation and make it great.

That idea grew to obsess Ickes and, until McKay, the Interior Dept. In 1925, under Ickes, all public lands were closed to public settlement. Thereafter the pattern was plain: the public domain was for the government, not the public. The result: 54 per cent of the eleven western states is still federal land, much of it undeveloped and unproductive. Nearly 100 million acres have never been surveyed. In Interior's forests some 9 billion valuable board feet of wind-thrown timber are moldering away, hindering new growth.

Will Neuberger, who summons the ghosts of "Teddy" and McNary for his defense, call also upon the spirit of Lincoln to champion McKay's "give-away"?

For Neuberger and Porter, who are always looking for a debate, that ought to be a natural.

Hal Boyle

By REILMAN MORIN For HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Since the movie makers seem to be in the middle of an "Egyptian cycle" just now, it is surprising that they have overlooked one of the great love stories of that fascinating land.

It involves a queen and a mysterious tragedy.

She was the lovely Nefertiti and you doubtless have seen copies of the famous head—the long, arching neck and perfect profile, the wide, almond shaped eyes, all balanced by a massive royal headdress.

In the wall engravings that have survived these 3,000 years, she appears as a slim and beautifully formed woman, almost as tall as her husband, the king. And this is a description of her in the words of some forgotten writer—

"The headdress, great in favor, lady of grace, sweet of love, mistress of the south and north, fair of face, gay with the two plumes, chief wife of the king, whom he loves, lady of the two lands, great of love, Nefertiti, living forever and ever."

But in the city where this appears, there is a ruined building that breathes of tragedy. It evidently was her home and it indicates that after perhaps 14 years of perfect marriage, she left the palace and her husband never to return.

Why? Did she quarrel with the king and leave voluntarily? Or was she sent away, blasted by some terrible disgrace? The secret has never been unlocked, but here is the story up to the point where it disappears in voiceless dark.

Her husband, Akhnaton, was an extraordinary man. If you read that excellent book, "The Egyptian," you learned a good deal about him. He is known as the "great heretic."

He broke away from the powerful and established priesthood that had gripped Egypt for thousands of years before his day. He introduced the concept of a single deity—an astonishing forerunner of Christianity—eliminated the elements of fear and dread that characterized the old religion.

In short, he abolished the thousands of gods and demons of the old days, and taught his people to worship in a spirit of joy and light. Again, the parallel between these patterns and the Christian concept, which was to appear many

Riddle Schools Purchase Bus

At a special meeting of the School District 70 a new 66-passenger school bus was purchased from Smith Motor Co. of Roseburg. Open bid price was presented by Frank Wickham was $6850. A major consideration in the purchase was the fact that this bus was the only one of several which were bid upon that could be delivered in time for the opening of school. It will arrive from Portland about Sept. 1.

Following a bus route survey late in July by Supt. Kenneth Stuart and Frank Wagoner, bus driver, it was found that a fourth bus would be necessary in the Riddle District this year.

The house-to-house canvass at that time showed the following approximate loads on the three big routes: Canyonville route—58, Shoestring—82, and Glenbrook—114. Glenbrook loop includes the homes at the Harbor Plywood mill—this same route being small enough that all of the children came in on one bus last year.

A fourth driver has not as yet been selected. Bus routes will be printed next week, stating the routes and times of departure.

The board of directors recently purchased a 1000-gallon gasoline tank and pump which are to be installed next week at the bus barns. Bids have been called for to provide gas for the school buses and driver training car based on a minimum purchase of approximately 6000 gallons for the year.

Peter Edson

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — The great hassle over U. S. armed forces reserve policy in which the Eisenhower administration has become involved seems somewhat inexcusable.

There has been a reserve problem since July 1, 1953. That was when Korean emergency legislation expired, giving the President power to call out the reserves for involuntary service.

Though faced with this problem for over a year, the White House and Department of Defense have not asked Congress to remedy the situation during this session.

The last-minute plan which former Assistant Secretary of Defense John A. Hannah announced just before he resigned came too late and caught everyone by surprise.

Essentially this plan called for compulsory military service by all young men, followed by service in the reserves. Active forces would be kept at three million men, with three million in reserve. Present reserve strength is 2,387,000, plus 330,000 now on active duty.

THE STICKER IN THE Hannah plan was that all the existing centuries later, is almost startling. Meanwhile, his life with his queen, Nefertiti, must have been a romantic idyll.

The engravings show them in charming poses... the king with his arm around the supporting her in a chariot... holding her hand as he dispenses gifts... the king and queen playing with their daughters.

Then something happened. She left him and went to live in a house on the north side of the royal capital that he had built. Nobody knows why.

But there is a theory that in his later years, Akhnaton recoiled from the fearful step he had taken, the rejection of the ancient gods. Perhaps the priests slowly wore him down.

There is a belief that Nefertiti, for political reasons, was an even more fierce enemy of the old gods than he was. And perhaps this was the basis for a terrible quarrel that caused her to leave him.

Her name was erased from many of the statues and much of the story has been lost.

Which leaves room for the scenario writers to graft a happy ending on it.

fine and imprisonment. That sounds simple. It is simple in theory. It isn't so simple in practice.

It's somewhat like the ancient and honorable recipe for making rabbit soup. Before you can have your soup you must first catch your rabbit. Before fining and imprisoning somebody for being a member of the communist party you must first prove that he is a member of the communist party.

What with the fifth amendment and all, we've been having quite a lot of trouble in PROVING things of that sort. Besides, Ike doesn't think too much of the idea of making membership in the communist party a crime. He thinks that would tend to drive the communist membership underground and make it harder than ever to bring the big shot communists to book in the pinches. There has been talk that he might veto such a bill.

So something had to be done. Here is what was done: A clause was substituted providing that a person who is a member of a COMMUNIST ACTION GROUP is subject to the penalties of the McCarran internal security act—which is already on the books.

In that case, of course, we'll still have to prove that he is a member of a communist action group, and that might be as difficult considering the fifth amendment, and all, as proving that he is or has been a member of the communist party. But at least the substituted clause provided language that maybe everybody can get together on, thus making possible the
