Ohio River 100 Years Wide In Respect To Segregation; Varied Opinions Discovered

By BEM PRICE

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—The Ohio River flows past here and some say it is 100 years wide.

On this, the southern side, is a tradition of white supremacy and racial segregation.

On the northern side the tradition essentially is one of equality and freedom, though discrimination often exists, stemming from community pressures rather than the law.

The farther South you go from the Ohio, the wider the river appears. You meet people who declare it would take 10 years more to bridge the gap.

There are people however, here who do not hold with the 100-year theory.

Mrs. Robert B. Hinkdebein is one. Mrs. William E. Yeagels another.

Each has seven children, six of whom are school age. Mrs. Hinkebein is white. Mrs. Yeager is Negro.

They believe that, given time and patience, any problems arising from the ending of segregation, especially in the public schools, can be worked out with a minimum of trouble.

Last May the U. S. Supreme Court ruled unanimously that legal segregation in the public schools was discriminatory and hence unconstitutional.

Since then the question for the South has been how and when to end segregation.

There is a widely shared theory among race relations authorities in the region that, generally speaking, segregation will be ended in various localities at a rate in direct proportion to the number of Negroes compared to the number of whites.

The theory also holds that desegregation will spread like rock ripples in a pond from the border states southward — again generally speaking — and will come first in communities with a long history of cordial race relations.

On the basis of this theory, Louisville should be among the first cities to solve the problem.

Everyone to whom I talked believed the most orderly way would be the admission of white and Negro children to the same school in the grammar school level "before they have a chance to pick up prejudices."

Louisville has an estimated population of 401,280 and roughly 16 per cent of the total is Negro—largely concentrated around the heart of the city.

There is no segregation on public transportation. The city's libraries are open to all. So is the University of Louisville, which draws 15 per cent of its operating revenue from the city.

Negro firemen work and live in the same stations as white firemen. The city's hospital is open to Negro nurse trainees. The city employs Negro policemen.

This summer Mayor Andrew Broaddus announced henceforth all city jobs would be open to Negroes.

Louisville has never had any major racial trouble. It has a long record of interracial cooperation.

Two powerful voices in the community — the Louisville Courier Journal and the Louisville Times — have long spoken for what they believe is simple justice for the Negroes.

Glendale Phone Rate Boost Given Approval

The Oregon Public Utilities Commission has approved a rate increase recently requested by the Glendale Telephone Company.

The approval was granted following a public hearing conducted by Commissioner Charles H. Heltzell at the Glendale City Hall on Aug. 25, according to correspondent Mrs. G. B. Fox.

Mentioned in the statement following the approval of the rate increase was the fact that service in the Glendale Telephone System is being improved, and the entire system is being converted to dial.

Plant expenditure in the overall modernization program will greatly exceed $100,000 mark when the work is all completed.

Many fish and other animals in the sea are attracted by light, says the National Geographic Society.

Fat People Live Longer Than Normal Weights

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Fat people with high blood pressure live longer than — or at least as long as — people with normal weight who suffer from the same trouble, say three Danish doctors.

They reported this conclusion after a study of 1,000 cases of high blood pressure followed for nearly 20 years. Their report was made to the Stockholm World Congress for Internal Medicine.

"The first remarkable finding in this investigation was that so many still survive," Dr. Poul Bechgaard, of the Arrhus Communal Hospital, Denmark, said.

He continued:

The high age among many of the cases was another surprise. Twenty years after they were first found to suffer from high blood pressure, 63 persons had reached the age of 76 or more. And 25 were more than 80.

Many of those rechecked after 20 years were "not seriously troubled by their high blood pressure "and 60 had actually regained normal blood pressure.

The highest mortality in high blood pressure patients occurred during the first two years, after which time there was a downward trend. The older the persons observed became, the smaller seemed the risk that they should die from high blood pressure.

Broadcast Listener Fails To Hear Thieves

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — An employe of a Salt Lake City scrap metal company was listening so intently to a radio broadcast of last Friday night's heavyweight title that he didn't hear thieves enter the company lot and make off with two tons of scrap iron.

After the Spanish conquest of Mexico, historians estimate that about 300,000 Spaniards entered the country and settled in a population of several million Indians.

NO TIMBER BIDS

A small auxiliary sale of O & C salvage timber on the Tiller-Trail Road drew no bids over the weekend. It will now come under the 90-day clause.

The timber included 35,000 board feet of Douglas fir appraised at $5 a thousand and 4,000 feet of sugar pine appraised at $20.10. Total appraised price was $255.40.

The tract will now be advertised and then be put up for sale to any bidder in a period of 90 days. The timber can be sold for any primary manufacturing in any O&C marketing area now, according to BLM Forester James Watts.

The next scheduled sale is Oct. 6.
