Cong. Ellsworth To Leave Tonight For Washington; Busy Time Reported Here

Cong. Harris Ellsworth made ready to close his congressional service office in Roseburg Monday.

Tonight he and Mrs. Ellsworth leave for Washington, D.C., and another busy legislative session which convenes Jan. 5.

The Roseburg legislator said he hated to leave home. The Ellsworths have been in Oregon since around Labor Day. It's been a busy time.

After a strenuous campaign session, the Congressman took a deep breath and then plowed into the business of talking with constituents who came to visit him at his office in Room 317, Pacific Bldg., Roseburg.

He saw an average of three or four voters a day with a great variety of problems. "Most of the problems weren't too serious," he said Monday, "but they involved matters I was able to help solve."

Cong. Ellsworth urged people in his district to contact him when they have some kind of difficulty involving them and the government.

His advice, he hastened to add, doesn't cover tax matters. "The government supplies tax consultants," he said. Persons wishing to contact Cong. Ellsworth may do so by writing him at the House Office Bldg., Washington D.C.

While in Roseburg, his office was open in Washington. Visitors to Washington, D.C. in 1955 will find him and his staff in Room 1130 on the first floor of the House Office Bldg. The move this session from his old office on the sixth floor is the first he's made since going to Washington.

His time in Oregon wasn't all spent in the office. Often he was out talking with groups in the district who sought his advice. Here in Roseburg he has been helped by Mrs. Gordon Stewart. Cong. Ellsworth was very complimentary about his local secretary.

Back in Washington, his executive assistant, Hayden Garber, has been burning midnight oil getting

Main items of study were a base map of the county and some large-scale sheets of a six-mile area around Roseburg which will be used for land use study.

Earlier in the day, Bell, Baker and County Surveyor Ben B. Irving studied preliminary proposals for subdivision regulations in the county. Corrections and revisions were made, and a set of regulations will be discussed at the next commission meeting, Jan. 27.

Bell, who spends a few days each month in the county directing the groundwork of the commission, will return to Portland Wednesday evening.

Coleman plans to return to the University of Oregon at the end of the year so he can complete work on a degree. Another technician, Frank Johnson, will return to the planning office before that time.
