GOOD LEGISLATURE

Oregon City Enterprise-Courier

Bill Lambert, one-time news editor of the E-C and now a reporter for the Oregonian is going to help cover the Oregon legislature for his paper—a job which is not only choice assignment stuff, but a job which gives Lambert a chance to learn a lot.

Lambert has always been interested in politics and when he goes down to the legislature for his paper, he will find himself in the biggest political arena in the state. Because we've always found Lambert to be a good newsman with the ability to see things and report things impartially, we're going to be interested in his impressions.

As one of the December Oregon Voters pointed out, relations between the legislature and the press in Oregon have been far more congenial in Oregon than they are in some other states.

Not only does this happy relationship between the press and the legislature exist, but it goes a little deeper. Most individual legislators seem to trust the Oregon press and even committees of the legislature get along quite well under the working agreement.

Not so in some states where it has been the regular thing to hold executive sessions without the press—or worse, sessions to which reporters are allowed without their pens. Which means a reporter hears all and sees all but can write nothing.

For instance, in the legislature in Nebraska, reporters are not allowed to publish anything about executive sessions unless the chairman of the committee formally releases the report.

Under this kind of a system, nobody wins and it has led to considerable friction between the press and the state government. It forces newspapers into a sort of jungle warfare in which any information—or distortion of it—is fair game.

It's quite similar locally to the archaic grand jury system in which newspapermen make a bid for information from the grand jury and end up with partial information.

In the Oregon legislature, all executive sessions of committees are open to attendance by the press and have been so for 30 years. The press not only reports actions taken by the committee in executive sessions, but sets forth pertinent comments and the voting by individual members. Fortunately, it does so in an orderly way, such as has averted complaints as to the practice. We can recall no instance in which members of a committee have taken offense at such reports. However, if any member desires that certain procedures or comments shall be "off the record," his wish is respected by the press, which does not report the privileged statements or procedure but has limited itself to reporting the action formally taken, if any.

When an Oregon legislature committee goes into executive session, all lobbyists and all miscellaneous spectators are expected to leave the committee room, but the press is privileged to remain. It would be just as well if the lobbyists were permitted to remain provided they did not participate in the proceedings other than when questioned by a committee member on some point of information. In fact, it would be helpful to committees if lobbyists were allowed to remain for the sake of answering such questions as might be addressed to them. This customary departure of lobbyists makes quite a show at a committee session. The fact that the press remains apparently does not in the slightest degree interfere with free discussion by committee members. Perhaps that is because no member of the press is indiscreet enough to quote careless remarks.

CIUDAD TRUJILLO (4) — Leaves from a cruising notebook:

The Dominican Republic, called by Christopher Columbus "the fairest land under heaven," is today one of the most peaceful countries in the world.

Peace is maintained at pistol point. Here a man can whisper any god he pleases. He is also completely free to say anything he wants to—so long as he doesn't want to say anything against Rafael Leonidas Trujillo Molina, or the things Rafael Leonidas Trujillo Molina stands for. If he does want to, his freedom of speech becomes a figure of speech.

For this is a one-man republic of 2,300,000 people, and the one man is Generalissimo Rafael Leonidas Trujillo Molina, called by his exiled enemies a ruthless tyrant but known officially as "the benefactor of the fatherland."

A visitor here has the feeling of being watched, and the feeling is no illusion. All police states keep an eye on the movement of strangers.

Before leaving a cruise-ship in the harbor, the tourist is handed an identity slip a carbon copy of which has already been delivered to Dominican police.

"Don't lose this slip," he is warned. "The ship can't leave until all the slips have been turned back in."

Dominican citizens all carry an identity card too.

"Already I feel about as free as a handcuffed mummy," mumbled one tourist.

As you come ashore the first sight you see is an old fort. A top is mounted a gun able to fire either at ground targets or raiding airplanes. The fort is patrolled by armed guards.

Armed national police also walk the street. They are on guard at most national buildings, including the capital and the palatial residence of the generalissimo himself.

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — A plain-talking parakeet named "Kiwi" has moved into the new Senate office building quarters of Freshman Sen. George L. Bender (R., Ohio), right next to the suite occupied by Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

The bird really belongs to Senator Bender's secretary, Mrs. C. D. Terry. It has already learned to greet Bender with a "Hi Senator!" During the campaign it welcomed all callers at Senator Bender's office with "Bender for Senator."

Mr. Terry has kept Kiwi in the Bender office for over two years. It is so tame that it was allowed outside a cage. It never ventured outside the office.

At present, the small, blue-breasted, gray-winged bird is installed in one of the center offices of Bender's suite. But if the staff has anything to say about it, Kiwi will be put in the outer reception room to greet guests as they walk in the door. This friendly welcome never fails to make a hit with callers.

When Vice President Nixon's staff was informed that a parakeet was moving in next door, a rumor was started that the V.P. was seeking new quarters. But if the bird can be taught to give Vice President Nixon a "Hi Veep" greeting, it will probably win him over.

UNITED MINE WORKERS. Journal took a crack at AFL and CIO Presidents George Meany and Walter Reuther in a series of faked New Year's resolutions. They were based on the facts that Reuther drinks pop and Meany likes his sour mash. They ran like this:

"Meany—Resolved—I will try to like Green River sodas with orange ice when I get unified with Walter Reuther."

"Reuther—Resolved—I will try to learn to like Old Fitzgerald, now that I am going to be unified with George Meany."

"United Mine Workers — Resolved—We'll believe it when it happens."

considerable adjustment in the Roseburg Post Office's city delivery system was made necessary during 1954 because of new construction in the suburban areas.

Postmaster Clyde Carstens, in reviewing last year's activities, said it was necessary to establish a fifth mounted delivery route in the suburban areas. During the year, carrier stops increased by 276. The suburban territory is all served by mounted delivery.

On the basis of delivery stops, said Carstens, it is estimated that at least 25,000 patrons are being served from the Roseburg Post Office.

There now are eight foot routes and five mounted routes in addition to two parcel post, four rural and two star routes.

Postal receipts in the local office amounted to $234,120 for 1954. That represents an increase of $11,241, or 4 1/2 per cent, over 1953, the postmaster said.

He pointed out that it could be considered a normal gain despite the July-August lumber strike when postal receipts declined 11 per cent from 1953 for those two months. The loss was more than offset by gain in receipts during the December quarter, Carstens said.

Postal receipts have more than quadrupled since the boom period started in 1944. Receipts for 1943 were $55,080.

Commented Carstens: "It appears that the boom period of expansion is over and has settled down to normal growth."

DR. TERRY SPEAKER AT PTA MEET THURSDAY
The Wilbur - Winchester PTA meeting at the Wilbur School Thursday was opened with a flag salute and prayer read by Mrs. Fred Broszio, president.

The problem of procuring committees for the cub scout and boy scout programs was discussed. Walt Smith of Roseburg gave a short talk on the problem, expressing the hope that the program would not have to be dropped because of lack of interest on the part of the parents. Ben Smith, Jim Hennebeck and Mrs. Farnsworth volunteered to try to secure the necessary committee members and den mothers.

A committee was selected to determine what items the PTA should purchase for the school. Committee members are Howard Brothers, Art Crocker, Morris Lane and Les Moorhouse.

The program chairman, Mrs. Burton Holt, announced that the next meeting would be in the form of a panel discussion on report cards. Mr. Smith's room won the room count. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Olive Blondell and Mrs. Ray Ames.

Ben Smith introduced Dr. James Terry of the Veterans Facility, as speaker of the evening. Dr. Terry gave an informative talk on "Mental Deficiency," answering questions on the subject for members of the audience.

The Unknown God . . . Unknown to A CHRISTIAN NATION?

Our nation is often referred to as a Christian Nation. Sad to say, statistics do not support such a claim. Look at these figures:

In an average city of about 20,000 people, a religious census was taken, in which, only 25% even claimed to be Christian. Only 50% of that number were identified with any religious organization. Only 12 1/2% thought they were making a conscious effort to live the Christian life. The other 87 1/2% admitted that they were doing little or nothing in the way of an active Christian life. 87% of those people, BY THEIR OWN ADMISSIONS, of neglect and indifference, placed themselves ON THE DEVILS SIDE. Is this, indeed, a Christian Nation?

Listen to Jesus: "He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad." (Matthew 12:30) Whose side are YOU on? (No. 2 in a series of articles. No. 3 next Friday) Pd. Adv.
