

Talent Project Exclusion Termed 'Betrayal' By Sen. Neuberger In Senate Talk

WASHINGTON (AP)—The administration's decision not to budget money for starting construction of the Talent Irrigation Project, Sen. Neuberger (D-Ore.) said Wednesday, "constitutes a betrayal of the people of Southern Oregon."

In a speech prepared for the Senate, the newly elected senator declared:

"The people of Jackson County were sold a mirage—for political purposes."

The Talent Project, in the Rogue River Basin, would develop storage to water 8,640 acres of arid land and supplement the water supply of another 9,250 acres. Also included is a 15,000-kilowatt power plant. The project, estimated to cost $25 million, was authorized by Congress last summer.

Neuberger, in his maiden speech in the Senate, said Republicans staged celebrations during last fall's political campaign "heralding" the Talent Project.

"Yet, having used this important project, which has the support of Oregonians of all political persuasions, as a campaign device to drum up Republican votes," he declared, "the administration has now evidently abandoned interest in the project—as demonstrated by the fact that no funds have been included in the budget for construction of either irrigation works or the power plant."

Neuberger said both he and Sen. Morse (Ind-Ore) have urged the Department of Interior to request project funds and "will spare no effort to try to redeem the broken promises which the administration made to the people of Southern Oregon last year."

He said the budget for the year beginning July 1 should contain "at least $350,000" to restore Medford and Rogue River Valley canal systems and 2 1/2 million to start engineering and construction of the project.

Asserting that Oregon is one of the nation's fastest growing states and needs sound and steady development of its resources, Neuberger declared:

"Its people should not be subjected to so-called political 'authorizations' of projects, which then are cavalierly abandoned—once the campaign at the polls is over."

Capable men and women between the ages of 18 and 30 who have good driving ability and possess required state and local certificates and permits are eligible. It is necessary that the standard and advanced first aid classes be taken, and an instructor is available for this particular assignment upon request by 12 persons, reports Mrs. R. E. Herman, executive secretary of the local chapter.

Motor Service members may be assigned a variety of duties incident to the local chapter's program. Services available are eligible with transporting volunteers, staff, home service workers, disaster relief personnel and supplies; taking persons to and from hospitals, providing transportation for hospitalized service men and veterans and members of their families; transporting entertainers to aid from hospitals, and assisting in evacuation of the population from threatened areas.

It is most desirable that Douglas County re-establish a qualified motor corps group as soon as possible, Mrs. Herman said. Any interested person may call the local Red Cross office, 3-3233.

Persons who would like to join a Red Cross Motor Corps of the Douglas County Chapter are asked to make application as soon as possible so that proper training can be given in the near future.

Director Don Naden of the Roseburg "Y" said extension of services for 1935 means more money which the "Y" hopes to raise from persons interested in the program. "Memberships mean a partnership in helping subsidize young people," Naden said.

YMCA Member Drive Scheduled To Start Feb. 3

The YMCA annual membership drive gets under way Feb. 3, reports Director Don Naden. The drive will last through Feb. 14.

Chairman of the drive, William D. Green Jr., Wednesday listed the four captains who will be working under him. They are: Ira Byrd, Bill Garrison, Harry Hill and Mrs. Frank Brown. Mrs. Brown will head the group of women workers.

The general chairman and captains will meet Friday at the YMCA office in Roseburg to select their complement of workers. Green said 36 men and 16 women would be needed to carry out the work of the drive.

The goal in the campaign will be to secure 400 renewals and new memberships.

Total money needed is $3,000 according to Green. He said this is the amount needed to meet budget requirements which include addition of one new youth service. Green said the "Y" intends to hire a fulltime summer director for a summer recreation program.

The summer program will be climaxed by the summer camp in August. It has been tentatively planned to hold the camp at Diamond Lake again this year. Meanwhile, the "Y" is negotiating to purchase a campsite on the north fork of the Smith River for succeeding years. It will not serve as a camp this year.

Lobbyist At Legislature Much Maligned Character, But Reputable Individual

By ESTHER GEDDES

A highly specialized individual with a much maligned character is the lobbyist. He abounds in any legislative center, and contrary to cartoons who often make him resemble a satyr, he is a fairly reputable individual. He has to be or a "Phuff" that's the end of a promising career.

Of course, anyone who has any axe to grind, either selfish or philanthropic, and who tries to gain the aid of someone in authority is lobbying. But I am specifically referring to that group of individuals who actually make a full time career of it and have perfected the necessary technique to the nth degree.

There are seventy eight lobbyists whose names appear on a list of "LOBBYISTS UNINCORPORATED" in Salem this session and there are several more part time "legislative consultants" who aren't recorded in the book of office. Most of them hang out, or should I say "hang out their shingles" in the local hotels where they will be available for any tired or lonesome legislator to visit.

The interests represented are rather strikingly at variance. For example there are two men representing the Oregon Temperance League, and one each for the Oregon Brewer's Institute, Licensed Beverage Ass'n and The Wine Council.

One man chooses to call himself a representative for Christian Science, while another espouses Dog Racing. Nearly twenty represent organized labor or its affiliates, but there is only one brave enough to wave the placard for Employers.

In keeping with the fact that the economy of the state is so largely dependent upon our forests is the fact that there are six representing our forest industries. And also pointing up the significance attached to the power problems in the Northwest is the presence of representatives of six power groups—public or private.

Transportation interests are keeping keen eyes on what goes on in Salem. Railway Conductors, Railroad Associations, Railroad Trainmen, Railroad Brotherhoods, United Air Lines, and the Oregon Bus Association, as well as two representatives of truckers associations are on hand.

Just scanning the list I find disciples for the cause of drinking, or not-drinking, for barbers, teachers, longshoremen, doctors, farmers, truckers, fishers, accountants, judges, loggers and druggists all evidently flourishing and of course a thousand little causes all of which are important to somebody, somewhere. That is, they are important enough for people to be willing to pay to have someone look out for their interests.

I haven't seen anyone lobbying for unorganized mothers and it seems to me that field is being overlooked. But I have faith that another day some enterprising man, no doubt, will be doing a capable job of persuading legislators of the merits of motherhood and proposing legislation to make it a more attractive occupation for the reluctant.

GUARDIANS MEET

The Douglas County Guardian's Club will meet Monday evening at the Glendale Lodge Hall. There will be a dinner meeting, and guardians will be present from Glendale, Myrtle Creek, Roseburg, Riddle, Oakland and from the new Job's Daughters Bethel at Winston.

Company officials also announced that the firm is in the midst of building a power generating plant which will furnish all electrical power needed at Dillard for company operations.

Electricity will be steam-generated, with waste being used for fires to make steam. Officials said it is "another step in the company's program for further utilization of wood products."

A standby generating plant will be oil fed.

Myrtle Creek Teachers Pay To Remain Same

Myrtle Creek School teachers will continue to work at their present rate of pay, the Myrtle Creek school board decided Monday night.

Supt. Al Neet stated that after consideration of figures and facts, the request by the welfare committee of Classroom Teachers was denied. The request submitted earlier this month, asked that teachers be granted $30 per year more and asked they be allowed to receive regular pay raises for up to 15 years instead of the 12-year period now in effect.

Consideration Given Annexation At Myrtle Creek

The question of whether Herman's addition and its surrounding areas will take a step toward annexing itself to Myrtle Creek will probably be determined early in February.

At a meeting at the Super Y market in Myrtle Creek Tuesday night, a committee was appointed to canvass the area and determine the exact number of houses which would be hooked up to the city water line if it were annexed to the city.

The annexation situation has arisen as a means toward securing water in the area. The meeting was called last night to determine how many property owners would be interested in going into the city and to set definite boundaries.

The committee will report its findings to the Myrtle Creek City Council Feb. 1, according to Chairman Ruth M. Evans. The meeting at 7, another meeting will be held in the Super Y market to appraise property owners of the city council's reaction to the report.

A quick survey made at the meeting, 22 property owners voted unanimously to go into the city to secure water. On Forest Road, however, four of six owners voted against the tentative survey of location of a water main. Owners on Neal Lane south for 400 feet across Forest Road voted four to one in favor of the tentative route of a pipeline.

Probation Granted LeRoy Farella On Car Theft Charge

LeRoy Ralph Farella, 22, Portland, was given a two-year probation sentence, then granted probation by Judge Carl E. Wimberly in Douglas County Circuit Court Tuesday.

Farella waived his right to a grand jury hearing and pleaded guilty to a district attorney's information read by Dept. Dist. Atty. Don H. Sanders.

Farella was charged with larceny of personal property in connection with theft of a car in Roseburg Dec. 31.

He and his court-appointed attorney, Donald A. Dole, said Farella was under the influence of liquor at the time, that he wanted to visit relatives over New Year's. When he found a car near the Southern Pacific depot, belonging to Virgil Hassett of Eugene with the keys in it, he stole the vehicle.

Despite the fact it is no excuse for stealing a car, Judge Wimberly criticized the "bad practice" of leaving keys in cars.

Soon after the theft, Farella was arrested in Salem by state police. "See how quick you get picked up? You didn't even get to Portland, did you?" the judge said. Dole pointed out this was Farella's first "serious scrape with the law."

Farella promised to abide by probation rules, including one of "no drinking."

Amacher's Bill Would Outlaw Fishing Derbies

SALEM (AP)—Fishing derbies in Oregon would be outlawed by a bill to be introduced by Reps. Robert L. Eifstrom, Salem, and John P. Amacher, Winchester.

Eifstrom said that fishing derbies encourage wasteful fishing practices, and that state fish and game officials "don't like them."

"The big prizes offered by communities, resorts or businesses for the biggest fish caught, or the largest amount caught, amount to commercialism, not sportsmanship," Eifstrom said.

Eifstrom added that derbies are a big force in overtaxing the fishing resources.
