HEALTH AND SAFETY PROGRAM GIVEN AT BPW MEETING

Following a potluck dinner the BPW Club had the pleasure of having Dr. E. J. Wainscott and Joe Haystead as guest speakers Monday night. Dr. Wainscott spoke first on public health, saying "Public health can be put into three groups, physical, mental, social. Health is the primary objective of all education. Dr. Wainscott went on to say that we have advanced in all sciences but one, "How to Keep Out of War." In one half of a century we have increased the life expectancy twenty-two years. The time will come when it will be a disgrace to have a preeventative disease. There are now in the United States 5000 people one hundred years of age." Dr. Wainscott said that he would go along with the man thatt said: "He didn't mind growing old, he deemed it a privilege, for so many people are denied that privilege."

Dr. Wainscott closed his talk with the thought that it is the job of the health department to conserve the health of the people and that it is a fine thing to be living in the state of Oregon.

In line with Dr. Wainscott's talk on public health conservation, Joe Haystead of the state police told the Business and Professional Women about the state police. Certainly we defeat our purpose of conservation of public health unless public life is conserved on our highways.

The Oregon State Police was formed in 1931 by state legislature. It is the duty of the state police to guard public safety and protect property. There are in Oregon 400 officers in four districts with headquarters in the capital building in Salem.

Mr. Haystead said, "When the majority of the people get behind the wheel of a car we forget our good manners. Just a few years back we were neighborly and helpful to our fellow man, but somewhere along the line we have lost the good neighbor policy." In closing Mr. Haystead said: "The State Police are many things to many people; sometime acting as doctors, confessors and perhaps a goodly part of the time, referees, but always on the job for your protection."

Dr. Wainscott and Mr. Haystead were presented to the club by the chairman of the health and safety committee, Mrs. Flossie Virden.

Guests present: Mrs. E. J. Wainscott and Mrs. Ada Jane Dick.

The next meeting of the Club will be a public card party for the scholarship fund to be held at the clubhouse Feb. 14th.
