

IT'S ATOMIC—This is a drawing of "Atomium," representing nine atoms in cubic form, which will be the theme building for the 1958 World Fair in Brussels, Belgium. Each sphere will be 63 feet in diameter and the whole structure will be 426 feet high. Crossbeams will connect each "atom." Elevators will carry the public through the spheres, where they will view modern laboratories. The top-globe, partially made of glass, will be a restaurant.

Gladden Wants Legislators To Give More Privileges To Convicts; Hits Rioters

By PAUL W. HARVEY JR.
SALEM (AP)—State Prison Warden Clarence T. Gladden, who's been on the job 22 months, wants the Legislature to give his convicts a few more privileges.

But at the same time, he wants to crack down on prisoners who seize hostages, actively take part in riots, or who are guilty of gross insubordination.

Ten bills have been introduced in the Senate at his request.

Some opposition has developed to the bills to make things tougher for the unruly convicts. The opponents say they are too severe.

The bills granting extra privileges would:

1. Let prisoners go to funerals of close relatives, or to their bedside when they are seriously ill.
2. Permit reduction of sentences for good work done in prison maintenance work. This extra "good time" now is given only for convict labor that is performed in prison industry or agriculture.
3. Allow prisoners to make wills.

give power of attorney, and to acknowledge sale of property.

4. Permit transfer of prisoners to state hospitals for treatment. This now is done, but there's some doubt that it's entirely legal.

Another measure would permit convicts to pick fruit and vegetables on private farms, provided the produce is for use of state institutions.

Nobody opposes those bills, but that isn't true about two others.

They are:

Senate Bill 14—It provides that prisoners who take hostages shall get additional sentences of 20 years or more. If a hostage dies, all prisoners who take part would be guilty of first degree murder. No one convicted under this bill would be able to get a parole.

Senate Bill 17—Already passed by the Senate, it provides extra 10-year sentences for rioting, and five years for group insubordination.

No one could be convicted under these two bills, except by a jury trial, or by pleading guilty before a circuit judge.

Gladden says he needs these two bills to assure proper control of the few long-term convicts who often cause trouble.

Citing the fact that there recently have been hostages seized in prisons in Massachusetts, Nebraska and Saskatchewan, Gladden says:

"We need hostage legislation so there will be some deterrent to the few, hardened long-termers who now have nothing to lose if they seize a guard as a hostage. We also need a law that would deter these men from starting rebellions and riots."

He said that many states now are adopting this kind of legislation.

Gladden adds that while people can have sympathy for the prisoners, they also should give some sympathy to the families of the guards who are taken as hostages, or who have to quell riots.

Four years ago, the 15 prisoners in segregation cells at the Oregon prison took five guards as hostages. Armed with knives, these dangerous long-term convicts threatened to kill the guards unless their demands were met.

These demands included release from segregation, better food, and a lot of other things.

It took Virgil O'Malley, then warden, three hours of fast talking to get the guards released.

He had to yield to many of their demands. Discipline among those men wasn't much good after that.

BEAUTY OF THE DEEP—It's not an exotic orchid. It's not a creature from outer space. It is a model of a colonial jellyfish. Fashioned of blown glass, this object is part of a display of undersea creatures at the Carnegie Museum, Pittsburgh. In life, this jellyfish is found in large schools in the Indian Ocean.
