

Dennett Tells Of Communist Infiltration Of Pension Fund

SEATTLE (AP) — Ex-Communist Eugene V. Dennett said Saturday the Reds seized a "political opportunity" to infiltrate and control the Washington Pension Union in the late 1930s.

As the Seattle steelworker continued testimony before a House un-American activities subcommittee, members said he was divulging so much new information about the Communist Party that another hearing may be necessary here next June.

Dennett discussed the Pension Union after he said in earlier testimony that the Communists used unemployed citizens' groups, waterfront organizations and the once politically-potent Washington Commonwealth Federation to win support for policies dictated from the Soviet Union.

The witness was asked Saturday to clarify testimony he gave Friday that Harry Lundeberg, head of the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, had attended Communist meetings in Seattle during the mid-1930s. Lundeberg, known now as a strong anti-Communist, had denied attending meetings.

"I simply mentioned," Dennett explained, "that Mr. Lundeberg had attended a fraction (Communist) meeting, and that was common knowledge. I at no time accused him of being a Communist."

Dennett said Saturday that Ernest Fox, whom he described as Lundeberg's top assistant, "informed me that Lundeberg had attended top fraction meetings."

Dennett said Saturday that Ernest Fox, whom he described as Lundeberg's top assistant, "informed me that Lundeberg had attended top fraction meetings."

Costigan asked the Communist Party for help, Dennett related, and the party assigned the late William J. Pennock to assist Costigan. Pennock, who became head of the Pension Union, committed suicide while a defendant in Smith Act trials here in 1953.

Dennett said Communists also assigned former state Sen. Tom Rabbitt to help win control of the Pension Union.

Rabbitt invoked the Fifth Amendment in declining to tell the committee last June whether he ever had engaged in Communist activity.

SKILLED LABOR SHORTAGE PORTLAND (AP) — A shortage of certain types of skilled labor was reported Friday by the Portland office of the state Employment Service.

H. Klausen, assistant manager of the office, said office workers, engineers, survey crews and other technical workers are being sought. It will be a while yet before spring work creates enough jobs, though, for common labor, he said.

FANTASTIC WINNER—Arthur M. Underwood, of Rochester, N. Yalta Compilers Stuck Close To Notes On Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department officials who compiled the Yalta papers said Saturday they rejected many documents but stuck scrupulously close to available notes on the actual meeting sessions.

These officials, who worked on the Yalta project for years, made the statement in response to questions about criticism concerning the factual fullness of the report. Made public this week as the American record of the wartime Yalta conference.

British Prime Minister Churchill, the last surviving member of the Big Three who met at Yalta in 1945, has complained he found serious mistakes in press abstracts of the record.

Republican and Democratic members of Congress also have traded critical words over the report, and there have been some objections that documents were suppressed or edited.
