

Prison Authorities Studying Liquor Making By Convicts

BOSTON (AP) — Authorities Wednesday were investigating charges that liquor is manufactured at the Massachusetts State Prison, that organized gambling flourishes there and that hundreds of inmates live in terror of a group of desperate convicts.

The charges were made Tuesday by six state prison guards, who asked that their names be withheld for their own safety.

They said the group of desperadoes has virtually taken over control of the ancient prison where five guards were held hostage for 84 hours by four inmates last January.

Expressing their views at a news conference called by the AFL

State, County and Municipal Employees Union, the guards said: "The inmates got away with the last uprising and they know they're the bosses. They'll kill the next time. Up until now they've gotten away with everything but murder and haven't been punished."

They said the lives of guards are endangered daily because the four rebellious prisoners were not punished for their desperate, but futile, attempt to break out.

A grand jury returned no indictments in the matter after Superior Court Judge Paul G. Kirk asserted that "no good" would be accomplished by trying the convicts who already are under long sentences.

The guards said the seven-man citizens' committee which brought about the convicts' surrender last January inadvertently did more harm than good.

"It's common talk among the inmates," the guards said, "that the four revolt ringleaders were promised concessions."

The group of citizens said at the time of the successful negotiations with the prisoners that no concessions or promises were made.

Erwin D. Canham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor and chairman of the citizens committee said Tuesday night the committee stands by that statement.

He added, however, that the committee undoubtedly will meet in the near future and issue a statement on the guards' comments.

Mayor Welcomed On Arrival Home

LEBANON, Ore. (AP) — A welcoming caravan met Mayor Ralph Scroggin and his wife Wednesday on their return from the republic of Lebanon.

They were escorted to a luncheon at the Lions Club, where the mayor told of the trip he and representatives of six other U. S. cities named Lebanon took to the Near East.

They were guests of the Lebanon government two weeks, and Scroggin said the high point was receiving from the president of the republic the gold medal of merit.

He also told of warm hospitality. Once, he said, he mentioned that he and his wife would like to see Egypt, and quickly arrangements were made for a trip that took them through Egypt and to Jerusalem, Rome and Paris.

From there they went to London where they caught a plane Tuesday morning. They arrived in Portland by air Wednesday morning, where Mrs. Scroggin's son, Lyon Lawrence, met them to drive them home.
