New Drug Said Addiction Cause

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A new kind of drug addiction was described Tuesday by a government medical researcher.

The drug is meperidine (trade name Demerol) and is used like morphine to relieve pain.

Medical personnel have had a widespread but erroneous belief that meperidine is less habit-forming than other anti-pain drugs, said Dr. Harris Isbell, of the Addiction Research Center operated by the National Institute of Mental Health at Lexington, Ky. His report was read to the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

Although meperidine is only one-tenth as effective against pain as morphine, it has many other morphine-like characteristics, Dr. Isbell reported. Withdrawal of the new drug from a habitual user causes more restlessness and muscle-twitching than morphine withdrawal, the researcher said.

Doctors should take the same precautions against meperidine addiction as they do against morphine, Dr. Isbell added.

Women Files Claims When Left Out Of Will

COLEFAX, Wash. (AP) — Jennie West filed a $19,031 claim Monday against the $200,000 estate of Martha Williams, contending she was virtually left out of the will although promised she would be "adequately rewarded" for taking care of the woman.

Miss West said she quit a teaching job in 1942 to work for Miss Williams at $25 a month as housekeeper, nurse and chauffeur. The $25, she said, was gradually increased to $100.

Miss Williams, a resident of Rosalia in Whitman County, died Oct. 11. She left most of her estate to the Northwest Christian College of Eugene, Ore. The Rosalia Christian Church and other religious organizations were left farm land.

Miss West, 59, said she was left a life interest in a Rosalia house that was willed to the church there. This, and personal property willed to her, amounts to only $1,100, she claims.
