New rules permitting delegations to bolt the party's presidential ticket without threat of party discipline are under consideration by an advisory committee of the National Democratic Committee. The rules are proposed to avoid another Dixie rebellion when the committee investigating the Refugee Relief Act and the firing of Edward Corsi as a special adviser on refugee problems, was told that Corsi was ousted because he was "freewheeling all over the place without authority or responsibility for decision." The statement was made while Senator Watkins, R-Utah, and Senator Walter, D-Pa., argued over the latter's statement that the Act is a "phony." Walter holds its national convention in 1955. State organizations, under the new proposal, would be given responsibility for getting names of party nominees on state ballots.

The Senate Judiciary subcommittee claimed the Act, which would admit 214,000 non-quota immigrants by the end of next year, was pushed through Congress without adequate consideration. Watkins says the legislation can be made to work.

O & C Controversy Will Be Aired At Portland have the right to charge toll. Actual adoption of the new regulations was stopped by McKay about a month ago following numerous protests by the Western Forest Industries Ass., representing smaller operators. The WFAA plea drew the attention of Sens. Wayne Morse and Richard Neuberger, who also raised protests.

The WFAA and the Industrial Forestry Ass., representing some larger operators, each are to have representatives at the meeting. The position of the O & C counties in the matters will be that of "observer," Judge Hill said.

He pointed out here that the counties are "three-quarter stockholders" in the O & C lands, since three-fourths of the revenues from sales are directed into county treasuries in lieu of taxes.

The O & C association met this week in Salem and formulated its stand in the controversy. Hill explained three points:

1. The counties are interested in seeing that the BLM is given an opportunity to manage on a sustained yield basis in the O & C lands.

2. They are interested in preservation of competitive bidding open competition, since higher timber prices means more revenue to the counties.

3. They are interested in giving all elements of the timber industry equal opportunity in timber bidding.

Judge Hill said the counties are entering a dispute on an invitation of the Dept. of Interior. On Hill's committee are: Lane County Commissioner Ralph Peterson, Jackson Judge Rodney Keating and Clackamas Judge Wallace Telford.

eral days ago. The judge had both cases under advisement. Fenty's case had been continued in order that he could be given a mental examination, which, doctors at the Veterans Hospital said, he passed. He was charged with keeping his wife at gunpoint for 23 hours in her home near Oakland March 17-18.

He had told the court that he sought custody of their three children, but his wife, from whom he had been separated for some months, refused. He said he had planned to take his life in front of his wife.

Hopes Expressed For Livestock Scales At Elkton

A livestock and truck scale for the Elkton area is fast becoming a reality.

Some 20 persons meeting at the Elkton Lodge Hall Friday evening voted to incorporate as the Elkton Community Scale. They elected a board of directors and subscribed about half of the $2,500 necessary to finance the scale.

According to W. L. Anderson, Elkton, the scale will be located on the Rolfe Wilson Ranch. Wilson purchased the former Carl Binder ranch about a month ago. Construction will start as soon as the weather permits. The group hopes to have it in operation by June 1.

Plans call for purchase of a scale with a 15-ton capacity. There will be a weighing fee for non-members, Anderson said. He added that there was "still room for more members." He said persons who wished to become charter members should contact Wade Henderer, Elkton, or a board member. Henderer was elected secretary-treasurer of the organization.

Tentatively, the scale will serve the Elkton community. This encompasses the area from Scott's River to Drain and as far up the river as Tvee, Anderson said. He added there would be no limit to whom the scale would be available to whenever wished to haul in.

Five men were elected to the group's board of directors. Their terms are rotating. Officers are: Norman Weatherly, president, Elkton, one year; W. L. Anderson, Elkton, two years; Grant Madison, Oakland, three years; Wilson, Elkton, four years; and Norman Compton, Elkton, five years.

YOUR BODY

ROSEBURG, OREGON — These health articles are written and paid for by Dr. B. A. SMITH, Chiropractic and Naturopathic Physician, 1500 Garden Valley Road, in the interest of public health and to help you understand the body function. Look for these informative articles every Saturday.

Heart trouble, a term very often heard, covers a variety of different conditions. Common kinds of heart involvements are congenital malformation of the heart, rheumatic heart disease, coronary heart disease and conditions resulting from high blood pressure and many other complications.

In heart disease the heart muscle is either altered in structure through the influence of toxins—most of which are produced by infections causing the acute diseases—or the valves of the heart become defective. In other words the valves do not close properly and are leaky, or they may become obstructed. Such defects constitute what is called valvular heart disease, which is one of the most common forms of chronic disease of the heart. The effect of such a condition is that the heart does not force sufficient blood into the arteries, because the blood leaks backward, or is retarded in its flow into the arteries. However, there is a common provision of nature which frequently prevents such disturbances, this adjustment is called compensation.

This compensation consists of enlargement of the heart and an increase in its muscular power sufficient to overcome the defect in the valve. When compensation takes place, there may be so little disturbance produced by the disease of the valves that the person may be entirely ignorant of its existence. The compensation may be more or less perfect, and may vary in its length of duration. Occasionally a person may live to a ripe old age with a valvular disorder of the heart which has been prevented from giving any trouble by the compensating enlargement. When the enlargement is insufficient, or when after a time, the increase in muscular power caused by the enlarged heart ceases, then disturbances in circulation appear and are recognized by certain definite symptoms.

Among all the acute diseases, rheumatic fever is probably most frequently the one from which heart disease arises. Scarlet fever, diphtheria, pneumonia, small pox, erysipelas, blood poisoning and some others are often responsible for disease of the heart which may either be evident at a later period of the infection or occur at a later period.

While children may be born with heart defects, rarely is the tendency to heart disease inherited. Heart disease attacks all ages and both sexes. Valvular disease happens more frequently between the ages of eighteen and forty and a little more frequent in men. The changes in the blood vessels which make the vessels more brittle lead to disease of the heart in old age (Dr. Adv.)
