CAREFUL
cooking...

in a 15,500 gallon kettle!

to make Oregon's own beer your better buy

In Portland's spotlessly-clean Blitz Weinhard brewery, there's a kettle to make any housewife stare in amazement. It's the 15,500-gallon brew kettle, in which finest Oregon agricultural products, pure water, and other ingredients are carefully "cooked" to produce a beverage to grace any table.

The "chef" who watches over this huge kettle is the Blitz brewmaster and famed brewing authority, Dr. Max Zimmermann. Here, in Oregon's 99-year-old brewery, Dr. Zimmermann's "recipe for fine beer is carefully followed, down to the last ounce of yeast or pound of barley-malt.

All through the brewing process, the quantities, temperatures and transfer of materials are watched and controlled with a precision no housewife could match. Then, when the cooking is done, Blitz is aged in huge vats just the right length of time to give it a light, smooth, mellowness. After ageing, it goes into sterilized, thoroughly inspected bottles, cans or kegs and starts its final journey...to your table or favorite tavern, where you'll enjoy Blitz with the knowledge that this Oregon-made beverage will win the taste-test in any company, anywhere. For these reasons...and many more...

BETTER BUY BLITZ!

Here is a study in contrasts! At left, a former chief engineer at Blitz Weinhard looks at 10-barrel brew kettle with which Henry Weinhard started the brewery 99 years ago. At right, Dr. Max Zimmermann, widely-known brewing authority and present Blitz brewmaster, stands alongside the 15,500-gallon brew kettle in modern Blitz brewery.

BLITZ WEINHARD

Oregon's Own Fine Beer
Blitz Weinhard Co., Portland, Ore.

FACTS YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT BLITZ WEINHARD:

The Blitz Weinhard brewery is very fortunately situated for the making of fine beer. Portland offers one of the world's great brewing waters, Bull Run, and many of the world's other finest brewing ingredients are grown right here in Oregon.

Last year, in spite of the fact that there are more than 30 beer brands regularly sold in Oregon, one of every four glasses of beer consumed in the state was Blitz!

The Blitz Weinhard address on West Burnside street offers no difficulty for postoffice clerks, since the 99-year-old firm has been at the same Portland location since 1906!
