

Archie F. Wheeland Succumbs Friday

Archie Fred Wheeland, 59, resident of Roseburg since 1928, died of a heart attack Friday at Cottage Grove where he was visiting friends.

He was born in Missouri July 24, 1895, and later moved to Alberta, Canada, and served with the Canadian army during World War I.

He was married at Camrose, Alberta, on Aug. 20, 1922, to Fae Inez Dyer, who preceded him in death Feb. 8, 1952. He came to the Roseburg community in May 1928, and for a number of years was employed at the Roseburg Veterans Hospital.

He was member of Mt. Nebo Lodge 214 AF & AM, Knights Templar, and of Hallel Temple of the Shrine, Roseburg Shrine Club, Douglas Court 18, Order of the Amaranth, and the American Legion Post 16.

Surviving are three children, Willis Wheeland, Roseburg, Clifford Wheeland, Ocean Falls, B.C., and Mrs. R. O. (Berlie) Garey, Roseburg, and two brothers, Moses Wheeland, Alberta, Canada, and Jesse Wheeland, San Francisco.

Funeral services will be held in the chapel of Long & Orr Mortuary Thursday, May 5, at 11 a.m., with the Rev. Alfred S. Tyson of St. George's Episcopal Church officiating. Rites will be held at the residence of Mrs. M. Nebo Lodge and concluding services and interment will follow at Roseburg Memorial Gardens.

Legislature Seeks Early Adjournment Of Session

The Senate committee probably will reduce these property and income tax reductions.

If the Senate does that, there is a strong possibility that House members won't go for the sales tax, which was sold to them largely on the strength that it would reduce property and income levies.

It looks like the Senate committee will split on the sales tax bill, with the vote going either way. There isn't any assurance that the Senate will pass it, either.

The No. 2 problem probably will be acted upon by the House Saturday, and then go into a conference committee. This problem is the Senate bill boosting maximum weekly unemployment compensation benefits from $25 to $35, increasing employer payroll taxes about 50 per cent, extending coverage to employers of fewer than four workers, and disqualifying many workers from getting benefits.

Some senators want to prevent construction of more of the building program for institutions and colleges if the people refuse to accept any tax increases. This program has been passed by the House.

If such a clause is put on the program, a sharp disagreement between the Senate and House is likely.

There also is disagreement between the two houses over how much to increase industrial accident benefits, with the House wanting to go higher than the Senate. But this could be compromised easily.

Another problem is providing for school buildings in distressed districts. This bill, included in the sales tax package.

Roseburg Man Injured In Crash With Truck

A Roseburg man was reported in good condition at Douglas Community Hospital Saturday after a fire pickup was reportedly hit by a logging truck Friday.

Charles Otis Dennis, 1309 Medford St., told attendants he was driving the pickup along the South Umpqua Highway Friday afternoon when the mishap occurred. Hospital personnel said he suffered a bruised forehead.

Dennis is employed by the Canyon Logging Co. The unnamed driver of the logging truck works for the same company, Dennis said.

Roseburg To Host Oregon Assn. Of Hospitals In May

Roseburg took another giant step towards the title of Oregon's "convention" city of 1955 this week with the announcement from the Oregon Assn. of Hospitals that the group would hold its annual spring meeting here.

Some 130 persons are expected to attend sessions at the Hotel Umpqua May 16 and 17. They will represent administrative personnel.

Main topics of some 50 general and special hospitals for discussion are problems and new ideas in hospital operation, according to Harry Sanislo, administrator of Douglas Community Hospital.

Chief speaker is William Robinson, insurance specialist for the American Hospital Assn., Chicago, Ill.

The spring meeting will be opened at 9 a.m. May 16. Delegates will hear Irwin Wedel, state president, Salem Memorial Hospital; the Rev. Herman Hermann, Mercy Hospital chaplain; and Mayor Ernest Barker Jr., Roseburg.

Two daily sessions are scheduled, Sanislo said. The first immediately follows the official opening of the gathering. John Adams, chief accountant of Emanuel Hospital, Portland, will preside. Discussion will be devoted to many subjects including accounting, admitting of patients and financial arrangements.

Sanislo will conduct the afternoon's activities. Main topic relates to the responsibility of patient care, he said.

A banquet that evening at 7:30 will be held in the hotel's Indian Room. A major speaker will be heard. It is primarily a social get-together, Sanislo added.

A cowboy breakfast at 8 a.m. will open the second day of the meeting. It is sponsored by the Ladies of the Moose and will be held at the Douglas County Fairgrounds. Proceeds will be used for a nurses scholarship to be awarded a local girl.

Sister Mary Natalie, administrator of Mercy Hospital, Roseburg, will preside at the morning session May 17. Up for discussion are insurance programs and legalities encountered in the hospital field.

A Portland administrator, Wesley E. Lamm, of Physicians and Surgeons Hospital, will direct the closing session. It will be a general problem clinic.

Mrs. Logan was in trouble with the law last September when she shot her husband, James Lester Logan, in the arm with an old .41 caliber Colt pistol. Logan was seriously injured. Mrs. Logan was placed on probation after facing a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon, records show.

Judge Hill Gives Account Of O & C Meet In Portland

County Judge Carl C. Hill returned from Portland Friday with good news concerning the contested road regulations proposed for use in the Bureau of Land Management-administered O&C lands.

Hill acted as chairman of an Assn. of O&C Counties committee which participated in a discussion on the regulations with high Dept. of Interior officials during the week.

Under discussion were several proposed amendments to the present O&C right-of-way regulations on logging roads. The amendments were authored by James F. Doyle, Portland, area administrator for the Bureau of Land Management.

General accord was reached on the amendments by those invited to the meeting, Judge Hill said. They included delegates from the Industrial Forestry Assn., representing larger mill owners and timber buyers; the Western Forest Industries Assn., representing smaller operators; and the O&C counties committee.

However, two issues weren't resolved. Those dealt with ownership of roads in timber sale areas and the establishment of road use fees. Generally, according to Hill, the larger road-building operators sought to prove that roads should be used by others strictly on a rental-fee basis. The smaller operators contended that use payments should be on an amortization basis with users eventually paying fees only to cover costs of maintenance.

Points in the discussion have been taken under advisement by J. Reuel Armstrong, solicitor for the Dept. of Interior, and Edward Wooley, director of the Bureau of Land Management. Both came from Washington, D. C., for the meeting.

The discussion was brought about after the State O&C Advisory committee had approved new O&C right-of-way regulations formulated by a committee appointed by Sec. of Interior Douglas McKay.

Members of the WFIA immediately protested, claiming that the new proposed regulations would adversely affect open competition in BLM timber sales.

A Sutherland mill owner, John F. Buchanan, was one of those representing the WFIA at the meeting. Others were: Leonard Netzberg, WFIA attorney; Ed Kellenberger, Lebanon mill owner; and Ray Swanson, Not Mill owner and president of the WFIA.

Delegates for the IFA were: Roy Riddle Gas and Oil Producers Begin Drilling

Water Resources Measure Passage Said Step Forward

By ESTHER GEDDES, Legislature Correspondent. The future progress of Oregon was vitally affected by the passage of House Bill No. 25 in the Senate Thursday afternoon. The statement was correctly made that this is a monumental step forward in the evolution of our state.

The result of this particular bill will be the coordinating and integrating of the various commissions and boards now interested in the development and preservation of the Water Resources of the State under one seven-man Water Resources Board. Actually it provides for the abolishment of four presently existing agencies including the Willamette River Basin Commission and the Upper Columbia River Basin Commission.

Regret was expressed that such a step was not taken 50 years ago because now it is beginning to be a serious problem, and within a very few years it will be one of paramount importance. Water is probably the most important resource in Oregon.

Most of us think of Oregon as a state which may not actually be flowing with "milk and honey" but is certainly supplied with ample water. Actually this may not long be the case. Our per capita use of water is nearly double that of the average for the nation. This not only indicates that we may be remarkably clean, — but also that our industrial life is of the type that utilizes water as a vital potential.

Certainly intelligent study of the planning, and central authority to map a program of conservation should help insure an ample supply of water in the state for human consumption, animal consumption (fishing etc.) irrigation and commercial fisheries functioning.

The bill is an experiment, was passed overwhelmingly and should be a real step forward in the development of our state.

Reigleman's Case Will Go Before County Grand Jury

The state's case against Norman L. Reigleman, 28-year-old Bridgeport, Wash., man accused in the attempted rape of a Drain woman, will be brought before the grand jury.

Dist. Judge Warren A. Woodruff Friday afternoon ruled that enough evidence has been shown against the man to indicate probable guilt. His ruling came at the close of a preliminary hearing.

The 31-year-old mother of four pointed out Reigleman when Dist. Atty. Robert M. Stullis asked her if she could identify her assailant of March 21.

She said it was Reigleman who had accosted her that night as she walked home from a movie along Highway 99 in North Darin. She also testified that her attacker had threatened to kill her if she cried out and had struck her in the face with his fist "about four" times.

She told the court that the man stopped her along the highway, asking her the name of the town. Then he forced her over a four-foot embankment and beneath an old loading dock between the highway and Southern Pacific tracks, where she said the rape attempt took place.

While the assailant was shoving her, she recalled, she shouted to the driver of a passing car, "The car drove on."

She escaped her attacker after she told him that her husband was dead (he isn't) and that she would accompany him to Coo's Bay, where he said he could find work. He agreed to get his car, and she fled to a nearby house.

A passerby, unidentified, jettied down the car license number when he saw the incident, which he thought was a "family beef." The license number eventually was traced to Reigleman at Bridgeport, and he was arrested there two days after the attack.

Dep. Sheriff Larry Wright, who investigated, was the only other state's witness. Reigleman, represented by Robert G. Davis, didn't take the stand. Judge Woodruff reduced bail from $10,000 to $5,000.

State Board Approves Salk Polio Program

decision to allow their children to be inoculated. But he emphasized that the vaccine had been declared safe Friday by Oregon health officials.

The serum was en route by plane to many Oregon communities today. It will be given without cost to first and second graders.

The State Board of Health and the Oregon Medical Society's public health committee decided to go ahead with the mass inoculation program after expressing complete confidence in the effectiveness and safety of the vaccine.

The uncertainty arose after several communities in the nation held up mass vaccinations after several children received shots prepared in a California laboratory came down with polio.

The board of health and Medical Society took this fact into consideration in its study of the vaccine. The board reported that 80,379 cubic centimeters of the serum arrived by plane from laboratories in the East Friday night. The board said 76,000 were being distributed immediately with the rest being held in reserve.

Additional serum is expected in time to give most children their second shots by the end of the school year.

It was originally planned to start the Oregon vaccination program Monday. But doctors decided Friday that another week was needed to organize things properly.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The development and chief tester of the Salk polio vaccine worked with other medical experts today on a case-by-case study among the 29 children affected after receiving the shots.

Technical representatives of the drug manufacturers making the vaccine were added today to the conference started by Public Health Service representatives and 11 outside experts on polio and immunology.

These included Dr. Jonas E. Salk of Pittsburgh, who developed the vaccine, and Dr. Thomas Francis of the University of Michigan, who headed the team which evaluated results of widespread tests conducted last year.

The Public Health Service, discharging last night that it had called the experts for a two-day conference, said: "The consultants are reviewing the epidemiological and medical histories of polio cases who received the Cutter vaccine."

Barker said May Day-Pray Day will provide an opportunity for the citizens of Roseburg to join together for a single purpose in exerting the most powerful force at our command—prayer.

The Roseburg Dist. 4 School Board met Friday to discuss various items dealing with construction of a new school in the Hucrest area and additions to Joseph Lane Junior High School.

Agreements between the architect and the board were discussed. It was decided that the construction job's technical inspector, George White, will begin his work when the proceed order on the building is issued. He will be responsible to the architectural firm, Freeman, Hayslip, Tuft & Hewlett, and to the board.

Other minor items discussed included elevation of the school, type of downspouts, size of basement, type of floor coverings and arrangement of cafeteria.

Next Wednesday, May 4, a special committee will go to Portland to the architect's office to make final decisions on items discussed. Blueprints should be available soon after, Deller said. Then, a date can be set for contractors' bids.

YOUR BODY

ROSEBURG, OREGON — These health articles are written and paid for by Dr. B. A. SMITH, Chiropractic and Naturopathic Physician, 1500 Garden Valley Road, in the interest of public health and to help you understand the body function. Look for these informative articles every Saturday.

Minerals are very important elements of the body tissues. The integrity of each cell of the body is dependent upon its mineral content. Without them the tissue cells break down and become useless. Approximately nineteen of these mineral elements have been found in the human body and all of them are normally present in nutritious foods.

Calcium, the building material of the skeleton, is perhaps one of the most important of the minerals. Approximately ninety eight percent of the calcium in the body is contained in the bones where combined chiefly with phosphate, it gives strength and rigidity to the skeletal structure.

Bone is living tissue which is most susceptible to nutritional disturbances during the early periods of growth. Even in adult life, however, inadequate nutrition over a long period may lead to the bones becoming porous.

Smaller amounts of calcium are essential for such work as building strong teeth, maintaining the sensitivity of nerve tissue and muscle, and making blood clot when there is a wound. From the viewpoint of nutrition, the problem is to insure an adequate intake of calcium and phosphorus together with the necessary vitamins A and D to promote proper assimilation by the body tissues.

Raw milk is usually considered an excellent source of calcium, providing the soil in the area is rich in calcium. However, if the soil is deficient, the milk cannot be rich in calcium as the cow is unable to manufacture calcium without it being first assimilated by her from the foliage from which she grazes. The Pacific Northwest is generally considered to be deficient in calcium, much of it having been washed away by rains and not replenished. Calcium is also normally found in most fruits, meats, green vegetables, and whole grains in areas where the soil is well supplied.

Iron is another important mineral. It is a vital element to health of the red blood cells, and is needed to prevent anemia. Good sources of iron are green vegetables, fruits, egg yolk, lean red meat and whole grains.

Iodine for which the body has only a small requirement, is essential for health and proper function of the thyroid gland and for the prevention of goitre. Seafoods and vegetables grown in soil rich in iodine are good sources.

Some of the other minerals required by the body in trace amounts are Sodium, Potassium, Sulphur, Copper, Manganese, Nickel, and Chlorine. Several more found in minute quantities in the body tissues. (Pd. Adv.)
