Colloid goiter is usually noted by an enlargement of the thyroid gland, but no metabolic disturbance exists as in toxic goiter. Colloid goiter usually caused by lack of iodine in the food and water or by an unbalanced diet, particularly poor in vitamins B and C. Colloid goiter is more common in females, especially at puberty. Geographic location, that is where there is a lack of iodine in the soil, for example the Great Lakes region and certain other areas throughout the United States, is a predisposing factor in the cause of colloid goiter.

such when actually no treatment is necessary. Toxic goiter, on the other hand, is a disease resulting from over-function of the thyroid gland; it is characterized by increased metabolism, rapid heart beat, tremors, nervous irritability, protrusion of the eyeballs, and usually enlargement of the thyroid gland itself.

Graves' Disease as it is often called is also more commonly found in females than in males, especially in adult life from twenty to forty years of age. Contributing factors are emotional stress, shock, severe infections, heredity and geographic location, also as in colloid goiter. Glandular disorders other than that of the thyroid gland may contribute to the condition of toxic goiter; some of these glandular disorders are excess secretion of adrenalin by the adrenal gland, over-unction of the pituitary gland and decreased function of the islands of Langerhans of the pancreas. Some persons with toxic goiter experience gastro-intestinal disorders, including nausea, vomiting, diarrhea or constipation which lead some to become ulcer content and seek treatment for ulcers of the stomach. Persons with toxic goiter usually show a high metabolic rate when a metabolism test taken. (Pd. Ad.)

A presentation of plans for the state Eagles convention scheduled in Roseburg in June will be made at the regular forum luncheon of the Chamber of Commerce Monday noon at the Hotel Umpqua. Ellsworth Asks $3 Million For Two Large Dams

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Ellsworth (R-Ore) Friday asked a House Appropriations Subcommittee to okay three million dollars for construction of Cougar and Green Peter dams in Oregon.

He said the money should be made available "whether the projects are built under the partnership plan or... completely by the federal government."

President Eisenhower has asked Congress to appropriate two million dollars for construction of Cougar Dam and one million for Green Peter, subject to authorization by Congress for local interest to join with the government in the construction.

A bill by Ellsworth to accomplish this has been opposed by Democrats and still awaits action by a House Public Works Subcommittee. A similar proposal passed the House last year but died in the Senate.

Ellsworth said there is "extreme and pressing need for the flood control protection furnished by these two dams."

"The people in these areas," he said, "have waited patiently and have done everything within their power, including substantial financial expenditures, to protect themselves against present hazards and to expedite the construction of these projects."

Suspect Quizzed Following Early Morning Robbery

Roseburg police were questioning a suspect today after a man allegedly was robbed and assaulted early in the morning, Chief of Police Stan Olson said.

Officers said William C. Keagle, Nebor Trailer Court, told them he was robbed of $9 and a wrist watch by two men on East Douglas Street.

A short time later, police arrested Eugene Henry Powell, 23, Rt. 1 Box 20, as he drove along South Stephens street. Powell was charged with reckless driving, but is also being questioned in connection with the robbery.

Keagle said he had been at a local tavern Friday night when two men talked him into going to a car to look at some uranium ore. He said he and the men got into the car and drove up Douglas Street. Then, he said, the men stopped and dragged him from the car. One held a knife on him, he told officers. After the robbery, Keagle said he was told to lie still for a while, then the car was driven away.

The other suspect in the case has not been identified. Powell was alone when stopped by officers, who claim they clocked him at 45 miles per hour on Stephens. Saturday morning, Powell had not been charged with the robbery.

Judge Suspends Imposition Of Sentence On Boy

Circuit Judge Carl E. Wimberly Friday suspended imposition of sentence on an 18-year-old Sutherlin youth because he said he didn't know if batteries the boy admitted stealing were worth enough cash to prosecute him on a grand larceny charge.

The judge ordered Dept. Dist. Atty. Don H. Sanders to continue investigation of the case against Paul Louis Peterson, the prisoner, during arraignment. Peterson, during arraignment, signified his willingness to plead guilty to the charge, which involved theft of two caterpillar batteries and a screwdriver from John Bratton near Nonpariel. Peterson said a 15-year-old accomplice later sold the batteries to a service station in Sutherlin for a "salvage price."

While ordering further investigation, though, the judge cautioned the boy that he had no business stealing. But he added that it's "serious business" for an 18-year-old boy to plead guilty to a felony. To have his name on the circuit court records would reflect throughout his life, he stated.

In a second arraignment, Herman Elroy Arcey, 24, charged with grand larceny in the theft of an automobile, asked the court to appoint an attorney for him.

Oregon's Salk Vaccine Shot Program Postponed

when asked a second time, said a postponement this time might mean cancellation until fall. At McMinnville, 18 per cent of the parents who had authorized inoculations, sent in cancellations, taking their children out of the free program for first and second graders.

Dr. Samuel B. Osgood, state epidemiologist, said that from these county actions and the surgeon general's statement, it would be "reasonable" to conclude that the postponement would be ordered by the State Board of Health.

He said there really was no reason for it, though, aside from the confusion which grew up around the program. But, he said, "It would not be fair to the people of Oregon to go ahead when half of them are scared."

With the postponement a virtual certainty, the question of when inoculations would be given remained unanswered. Some medical men expressed the view that the mechanics of lining up the program was so difficult that postponement now meant virtual cancellation so far as this polo season is concerned. Others thought it could go ahead and the second shot—needed two to four weeks after the first—could be given even after start of summer school vacation.
