Sardine Assn. Protests Underwater Atom Blast

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Sardine Assn. here has protected the impending explosion of an atomic device in the Pacific Ocean as a danger to the sardine industry.

"This explosion may completely destroy not only the fish but the spawn," said George J. Christo, secretary of the packers. "The sardine industry as a whole has gone through seven very terrible years. Now that the sardines are on their way back to our waters we do not want anything to happen that will further delay the recovery of the fishery."
