

GARDEN LOVERS

MRS. HARRY S. BLACK, above, has one of the newer gardens in Roseburg at 520 East Lane St. where she and her husband both do considerable gardening. They have an especially fine collection of rhododendrons and are planning to add to the collection this year.

MRS. P. M. LEE, above, is shown standing by one of the exhibition-size rhododendrons in her beautiful formal garden at 502 East Cass St. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lee and their two daughters, Suzi and Carolyn, enjoy gardening. Mr. Lee is a co-distributor with A. Zenger in the Union Oil Company here.

MRS. O. R. PETERSEN, above, does an excellent job of gardening at her attractive home at 508 Overlook. With the number of plants she has on hand to beautify the garden, it is a wonder her husband, who owns Park and Shop, has any left at his place of business. The Petersens have two sons.

MRS. JOHN PERKINS, above, is shown in the hillside garden of her beautiful home at 510 Hawthorne Terrace. Although the Perkins home, which is one of Roseburg's finest, has only been built two years, already the garden is becoming outstanding. A fine planting of rhododendrons has been made in the driveway circle, while a large rockery has been started off the living-dining areas. Mr. and Mrs. Perkins have three children, Penny, Danny and Tony.

MISS VIRLIE TRACY, above, who resides at 205 S. Kane St., says most of the garden is made beautiful by Dr. H. C. Church, while Dr. Church gives Miss Tracy just credit for her interest and work in the yard. Miss Tracy is a retired principal of Benson School.
