Truckers Believed Rejecting Offer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Federal conciliator John L. Fenton said Wednesday that if all striking AFL Teamsters unions reject the truckers' latest offer, both sides will resume negotiations Thursday.

Many of the 51 locals involved in the truck tieup in 11 Western states already have announced their members have turned down the offer by majorities ranging from 2 to 1 to nearly unanimous. Not one local has voted for it.

The balloting should be finished Wednesday night, Fenton said. "Both sides have agreed to resume negotiations," he added. "I'm still hopeful of finding an equitable solution."

He would not say how soon he thought it might come. As results of union votes rolled in they echoed the views of Frank Brewster, president of the Western Conference of Teamsters: The offer, he said, was "not good enough."

Ford Motor Strike Averted By At Least Four Days

added time "to explore the company's new proposals; and to try to work out our differences on all unresolved issues."

Reuther said union negotiators had advised the Ford company that "the contract will not be extended beyond Monday, June 6."

"If agreement has not been reached between now and that date a strike will begin," Reuther's statement said.

Meanwhile approximately 2,000 workers at Ford's South Chicago assembly plant quit work Wednesday in apparent anticipation of a strike Wednesday night. UAW leaders were expected to urge them back to work.

After Reuther issued his statement, union and company negotiators continued their bargaining sessions. It was announced that a "moratorium" of any report of what went on in the closed door meeting would be observed by the company and union until noon Thursday.

This was the second 24-hour clamp-down on bargaining developments.

Reuther's statement said that in addition to the union's guaranteed annual wage demand, issue still unresolved include the duration of the contract, wages, security provisions, pension improvements, and numerous other matters relating to the working conditions and the welfare of Ford workers and their families.

Because of the Ford contract extension, the Ford and General Motors contracts will run out at roughly the same time. The GM-UAW agreement expires June 7 but the lack of a specific hour of termination could carry the two pacts down to the wire together.

Earlier Wednesday Ford was reported to have indicated willingness to bargain on the union-demanded guaranteed annual wage.

The Detroit Times said it was informed by one source that Ford had indicated it might grant jobless payments to laid-off workers supplementing state unemployment compensation.
