Order Out To Pick Up Four Suspects In Bank Robbery

By STAN SWINTON

ROME — An order was flashed to police throughout Italy this week to keep a close watch for four men and a girl, suspected of complicity in New York's daring $305,000 record bank robbery last April.

There was no arrest order. But the word went out to find the suspects and trail them until further orders.

Interpol, the little-publicized international police organization which acts as a United Nations against crime, gave the word.

In New York a deputy police commissioner said no such activity had been requested by New York police.

The Woodside, Queens, branch of the Chase Manhattan Bank was held up by machine gunners in a bold and carefully planned robbery April 6. The Queens district attorney said in New York the men sought in Italy had been under surveillance because of suspicious actions. He added the men reportedly planned to return to the United States and that if they did, they would be questioned.

Police said the leader of the group is believed to be Giuseppe di Taro, also known as John Michael di Taro, a 37-year-old New Yorker.

They gave the names of those with him as John Timothy O'Connell, 35; Daniel William McGuire, 28; Peter Jerome Kirdam, 34, of Manchester, England; and Jeanette Forest, 27, of Montreal, Canada.

Police speculated that if they are trying to get away through Italy, they probably hope to slip through to Africa or the Middle East in a small ship.

No roadblocks or other extraordinary measures have been ordered. They are not necessary in Italy.

No one—not even an Italian—can get public lodging without filing out a police form. Each of these is checked within hours. Foreigners must show passports. Wanted persons usually are turned up within 24 to 48 hours.

U. S. embassy sources declined to confirm or deny reports that Italian police had been asked to establish a nationwide dragnet.

English kings formerly washed the feet of a number of poor people on Maundy Thursday as a religious rite, but the practice was abandoned after the time of James II.

Engineers Told Columbia River Bridge Is Menace

PORTLAND — Army Engineers were told at a hearing here this week that the present Columbia River bridge between Vancouver, Wash., and Portland is a menace to navigation.

Tugboat operators, yachtsmen, the Columbia River Pilots Assn., and dock and port commissions said the bridge should be demolished before a new bridge is built next to it.

They said more clearance should be provided for both height and width.

The remodeling cost was estimated at $2,310,000. If the Army Engineers decide to order remodeling, Oregon and Washington are ready to pay 25 per cent of the cost each to match a federal government contribution of 50 per cent. Oregon's highway engineer R. H. Baldock, said.

The proposed new bridge will parallel the present structure and each will carry one-way traffic. It is planned to be ready in 1958.

KITCHEN TRAGEDY

QUINCY, Mass. — Mrs. Eleanor Sullivan, 56, dropped a bottle of liquid on the kitchen floor. She slipped on the liquid and landed on the broken bottle, opening a nine-inch fatal gash on her leg, an autopsy revealed.
