

Commission Opposes Ike's Highway Financing Plans, Favors State, Local Taxing

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Commission on Intergovernmental Relations took issue Monday with President Eisenhower's highway financing program and called on his administration to assume full command of civil defense.

The 25-member commission, created by Congress two years ago to recommend boundary lines for overlapping taxes and encroaching governmental authority, filed with the President a 311-page document proposing:

1. Withdrawal of the federal government from some fields of taxation—leaving them to the states and cities—as rapidly as tax reduction becomes possible. It named no specific taxes.
2. Federal "payment in lieu of taxes" to cities and states, in compensation for real estate stricken from their tax roll because of federal ownership.
3. Increased federal appropriations for a stepped-up, state-administered highway construction program to be financed on a "pay-as-you-build" basis not by borrowing.
4. Action by Congress to transfer responsibility for civil defense to Washington from the state and cities—which the commissions aid are ill-equipped financially and otherwise to carry the burden.
5. Continuation with some important changes and curtailments of federal grants-in-aid, under which more than two billion dollars annually is furnished to states and local governments. The federal grant, the report said, "has become a fully matured device of cooperative government."

Local Aid Emphasized
The commission headed by Meyer Kestnbaum of Chicago, president of the Hart Schaffner & Marx clothing concern, emphasized this view:
"A fundamental objective of our system of government should be to keep centralization to a minimum and state-local responsibility to a maximum."

It called on the government to exercise "forbearance" in encroaching on the jurisdiction of states, counties and cities, but emphasized that the state must modernize their constitution and tax systems and reorganize their administrative machinery to serve the public better. It proposed that each state launch "a searching reappraisal of its fiscal policies."

While the cities and states are at a disadvantage in competing with the federal government in the same fields of tax collection the commission said, "substantial potential for more revenue exists in almost all if not all, states."

Sen. Morse Dissents
The report, although sprinkled with dissents, mustered a majority on all major issues. Sen. Morse (D-Ore.) and Humphrey (D-Minn.) contributed most of the dissents, and Morse ended by filing a general dissent.
"As a constitutional liberal," the as Israeli and Arab soldiers fire on one another, and rationing sends prices (blackmarket and other) spiraling.

As a youngster, Stella remembers the emotion-filled day in 1947 when Israeli women announced their intentions to fight with their brothers for their country. Overwhelmed, the government reversed its decision of not drafting women. It marked a turning point in the nation's welfare, Miss Bass said. There are 1 1/2 million citizens in Israel, some 500,000 reside in Tel-Aviv.
Of all factors, education, perhaps, is most different here.
Schooling is, to quote her, "there a dreadful thing." Subjects are mandatory. During one year, Stella's schedule included algebra, geometry, physics, chemistry, French, Hebrew, English, Bible, science (human nature) and Arabic. She dropped the latter.
Because few students can afford to continue on to college, the curriculum is difficult. And there is a "distance" between teacher and student. "Here," she continued, "students and teachers are friends." She prefers such a system.
Israeli students have no school activities. Classes and study fill each day. Class from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.; study until midnight or later. Even in school the army enters in. The last three years of high school, students spend an hour of early morning training, before classes.
Stella's father, Dr. Max Bass, is a brother of Mrs. Schaefer. He is a physician in Tel-Aviv. Stella's mother and brother Gideon, 4, comprise the rest of her immediate family.

Enlarged Fair Premium Books Now Available
The new, enlarged Douglas County Fair premium book has returned from the printers. Copies of the handsome piece are available at the General Mills Feed Store, Douglas County Flour Mill and Chamber of Commerce offices in Roseburg. It may be secured by writing PO Box 750, Roseburg.
For the first time the book contains advertising. It is printed locally at Mid-Oregon Printing and Stationery Co. A two-color black and chartreuse cover with drawings of cows, horses, etc., was printed by the California firm.
Included in the 84 pages is a special almanac section containing helpful hints to readers.
Several hundred books have been mailed to 4-H club members and others. Some copies for 4-Hers are available at the Douglas County Extension Office.

YOUTHS REMANDED
Two 16-year-old youths were remanded to juvenile department of officers Monday by District Judge Warren A. Woodruff after the boys appeared on vagrancy charges.
The pair was caught by a merchant patrolman early Sunday removing a wheel from a car in a lot next to the City Drive In Garage, according to a deputy sheriff called to the scene.

Truck Accident Injures Driver
A Myrtle Creek logging truck driver is in serious condition in Sacred Heart Hospital, Medford, after jumping from his truck near the divide on the Tiller-Traill Highway southeast of Tiller Monday morning.
When the air brakes on the truck failed, William R. Rayburn leaped. He suffered multiple fractures, according to Mrs. Virginia Byrd, News-Review correspondent at Tiller, who was at the accident scene.
Passersby aided Rayburn until an ambulance arrived from Medford about 1 1/2 hours later. Mrs. Byrd said the cab of the truck, which left the highway after Rayburn jumped, was smashed flat. Rayburn was returning with his empty truck from Medford when the accident occurred.
Also in the Medford hospital is Frank Elrod, injured in the Tiller mill about 10 days ago when he was in some way struck in the head. He suffered a brain concussion. Mrs. Byrd said he'd be confined to the hospital for about 10 more days.

Elkhorn Tavern Is Burglarized
The second burglary this month of the Elkhorn Tavern, Elkton, was under investigation today by sheriff's officers, according to Sheriff Ira C. Byrd.
The sheriff said about $240 in change was taken early Sunday when burglars forced a door and smashed various coin machines.
An employee, Ross McDonald, discovered the crime the same day. An investigating officer said the tavern's front door was badly torn up with a "jimmy" after an unsuccessful attempt to force a side door.
Money, nothing larger than a quarter, was taken from music, two pinball, a cigarette and shuffleboard machines.
On June 3, about $140 was taken from the tavern, apparently by someone with a key or someone who had hidden in the place after closing hours. Tavern owner is Allen Nash, Drain.
