YOUR BODY

ROSEBURG, OREGON — These health articles are written and paid for by Dr. B. A. SMITH, Chiropractic and Naturopathic Physician, 1500 Garden Valley Road, in the interest of public health and to help you understand the body function. Look for these informative articles every Saturday.

Iodine constitutes only about three parts per million of the body weight. Nevertheless, it is extremely important to the normal metabolism. Approximately three-fifths of all the iodine in the body is concentrated in the thyroid gland, which secretes into the blood a hormone, Thyroxin, that contains considerable amounts of iodine. This substance, when circulated through the body, has the effect of stimulating the rate of activity of body tissues. The secretion of this potent hormone is regulated so that too much of it will not be released at any one time under normal conditions. Also stores of iodine are maintained in the thyroid and other tissues, thereby the body will not be dependent upon its day-to-day supply of this element.

If the food and water supplies too little iodine over long periods, the stores of this element become depleted. In time, the thyroid responds to the shortage of iodine by supplying less thyroxin than normally and the metabolic rate is lowered. As a result there is a tendency to increased weight, lowered vitality, sluggish mentality, and the entire organism suffers. The thyroid, which is functioning under difficulty when insufficiently supplied with iodine, becomes enlarged, a condition known as simple goiter.

For many years it has been recognized that simple goiter, now known to be in origin an iodine deficiency disease, was especially prevalent in certain regions. This disease has been found to occur more frequently in such interior sections of the United States as the basin of the Great Lakes, and in the Pacific Northwest, than in other parts of the country. In such regions, the iodine content of the water, soil, and locally grown foods is very low. Men are less subject to goiter than women, and the thyroid trouble is most likely to make its appearance at adolescence or during pregnancy. Babies and the young of domestic animals may be still-born and goiterous, even though the mother has not shown evidence of iodine insufficiency. Those in whom the iodine deficiency has not reached so great a degree may show other symptoms less marked than thyroid enlargement.

Simple goiter can be prevented by an adequate supply of iodine. In goiterous regions the natural low iodine content of foods and water should be supplemented with iodine from other sources, long as the field of nutrition, since the prevention of this disease by it involves replacement of an essential nutrient which should normally be supplied in food.

Geneva Deadlock Holds; Ike Returning To U. S.

summit conferences began, President Eisenhower talked nearly an hour with Soviet Defense Minister Georgi K. Zhukov, who requested the appointment.

There was speculation, but no confirmation, that they talked about the President's idea for swapping military blueprints and for mutual aerial inspection of military installations.

The Russian leaders were reported to be impressed by Eisenhower's personal sincerity in putting forward his far-reaching proposal. But they were said to be equally critical of it on grounds that it seemed to avoid what the Soviets regard as the basic and most urgent issue in any modern disarmament program—the prohibition of nuclear weapons.

It appeared likely Russia might offer eventually to go along with Eisenhower's plan, but only if it is linked at the very least with a big-power pledge renouncing the initial use of nuclear weapons.

Ex-Secretary Of State Cordell Hull Passes

board for establishing an enduring world peace.

Awarded Peace Prize

He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1945 in tribute to his efforts to develop a worldwide, effective plan to banish war. These efforts led to creation of the United Nations.

Hull was in Congress for 24 years — 22 in the House and two in the Senate — before he became secretary of state.

Hull was described by a close friend as considering five accomplishments to be of primary importance in his long career.

1. His part in the development of the United Nations.
2. The development of nonpartisanship in foreign policy.
3. His part in evolving the "good neighbor policy" toward Latin America.
4. The enactment of the trade agreements program.
5. His contribution to raising standards of international morality and conduct, which Hull considered to be of the utmost importance if nations are to learn to live together in peace and friendship.

Ousted Judge Wins Long Struggle For Passport

WASHINGTON — Former Judge William Clark reportedly will get next week the unrestricted passport to Germany for which he has battled more than a year in the courts.

Officials said today the favorable ruling will be announced within a few days by Director Frances G. Knight of the passport division. They said recommendations based on a formal hearing July 8 already have been forwarded to a family.

Clark was fired in January, 1954, as chief judge of the American Appeals Court in West Germany. His ouster climaxed a long feud with James B. Conant, then high commissioner and now U. S. ambassador in West Germany. His court battle for a passport started June 18, 1954.

While he was an overseas judge, Clark accused Conant of interfering with the independence of the American Appeals Court in West Germany. Conant, in turn, said Clark was guilty of "irresponsible conduct," and he did not want the jurist in Berlin. Clark said the real reason he was fired was that he upheld the rights of Americans. He denied that it was because of economy or a decline in court business, as he said Conant put it.

Uranium Value In Lake County Still Very Low

LAKEVIEW — This Southern Oregon town, near the site of new uranium claims, is expecting an invasion of prospectors over the week end.

As soon as reports of the strike were published earlier this month, strangers began arriving in town to outfit for expeditions in the hills. Even businessmen of the community are spending their spare time in the hills, prospecting.

A number of claims have been staked, the two most publicized being in the August Creek area 34 miles northwest of here. Selected ore samples from one of these strikes tested out at a maximum of 1.4 per cent in the best sample. The Atomic Energy Commission considers .1 per cent the minimum for commercial value. Preliminary assays by the U. S. Bureau of Mines laboratories at Albany, Ore., showed average samples with a uranium content of more than .6 per cent.

There has been no definite word, however, that there is enough uranium ore in the nearby hills to make mining it worthwhile. The AEC has sent a representative here, but it has not been learned what reports he has made.

Car Track Unit Defect Tragedy Cause At Oakland

An investigation showed that a defective track for a sliding door on a boxcar led to the death of the father of eight children, Ralph Edward Spencer, of Oakland Friday.

The Martin Bros. Box Co. of Oregon car loader was killed when the heavy door slipped off its track and fell on his head, Dep. Coroner Vernon Little said. He said Spencer and Don Larson were working on the double train door with Larson inside the car pushing while Spencer stood outside holding the locking device.

Little reported that when the door was opened, it was released from the top and tumbled off the track. It caught Spencer's head between the steel edge of the dock and the door, causing the jolted skull fractures, according to Coroner L. F. Powers. Little estimated the door weighed between 600 and 700 pounds.

Little also reported that after the accident, about eight feet of the track on which the door was suspended was found missing.

U. S. Marshal's Office At Medford Abolished

PORTLAND — U. S. Marshal Harold Sexton said Saturday the Justice Department is closing the Medford station of the marshal's office.

Sexton said in a letter to the Southern Oregon Bar Assn. that the office is being closed for economy. The deputy now in Medford will be transferred to the Portland office to replace a deputy who is retiring.

Sexton said the need for a deputy in Medford no longer exists, especially since the state has assumed jurisdiction of the Klamath Indian Reservation. He said the Medford deputy served only one action filed by a Southern Oregon attorney last year.

The Medford station has existed for 40 years, 17 of which Deputy Paul Hanlin has served as deputy.

NW Governors Predict 2nd Run By Eisenhower

PORTLAND — The Pacific Northwest's three governors Friday night predicted President Eisenhower will run again.

Gov. Robert Smylie of Idaho did the most predicting. He also talked of the possibility the other two governors—Arthur B. Langlie of Washington and Paul Patterson of Oregon — will be candidates for the U. S. Senate in their states next year.

Smylie told the more than 500 guests, who paid $100 dollars a plate for the Republican fund-raising dinner, that he was confident the President would accept the responsibility if called upon to seek a second term.

Smylie also said he was sure Patterson and Langlie would be ready and willing to serve if called upon.

Langlie, the only one of the three who directed harsh criticism at the Democrats, said the Republican Party had let the opposition "slip in" at the last election. He said the Democrats appeared to be "suffering" and he added that "the rest of the country is suffering" too.

Patterson praised the Republican administration. He urged party members to spend more time publicizing the accomplishments and less time worrying about the Democrats.

There were 572 persons at the banquet and between 50 and 75 more were unable to get in the dining room and listened to the speeches from the outside.
